The Freedman's Savings and Trust Company [microform] : letters received by the commissioners, 1870-1914 / editor, Robert E. Lester.

microfilm reels ; 35 mm. — (Black studies research sources)

Summary: Reproduces the records of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company, a savings bank chartered by Congress in early 1865 for the benefit of ex-slaves. In an effort to protect the interests of depositors and their heirs in the event of a depositor's death, the bank collected a substantial amount of detailed information about each depositor and his or her family. While most of the surviving records relate to the bank and its collapse, they are still a useful source for genealogical data concerning African American families for the period following the Civil War.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

In an effort to better meet the needs of African American soldiers and civilians after the Civil War, John W. Alvord, an abolitionist and Congregational minister, proposed the establishment of a permanent savings bank in 1865. The Freedman's Savings and Trust Company, colloquially known as the Freedman's bank, opened branches in Savannah, New Orleans, Vicksburg, Charleston, Richmond, and Houston. By 1871, the Freedman's bank operated thirty-seven branch offices in seventeen states and the District of Columbia.

This series of Letters Received by the Commissioners of The Freedman's Savings and Trust Company, 1870–1914, consists of correspondence, loan papers, and bank books sent to commissioners by depositors. Three of the commissioners, John A. J. Creswell, Robert Purvis, and Robert H. T. Leipold, are the principal correspondents. Scattered throughout this edition are deeds and conveyances, dividend checks, wills, powers of attorney, and other legal documents that reveal significant detail about African American personal finance in the decades following the Civil War. Receipts filmed for this series inform the researcher of personal consumption patterns and the availability of consumer goods in the African American community. Legal historians concerned with property law will find useful the numerous records from court cases related to financial disputes, while genealogists should examine legal documents for valuable information about the African American family.

The first series comprises correspondence from depositors, often through legal representation. Most letters are from lawyers to the commissioners or opposing counsel. Correspondence, which spans the first ten reels, is arranged alphabetically by state. The District of Columbia (Reel 6, Frame 0511–Reel 10, Frame 0494) is the largest component of this series. The Freedman's bank moved its headquarters from New York to Washington, D.C., in 1867. Until 1871, Washington, D.C., had been subdivided into Washington City and Washington County, which is reflected in the correspondence. Complications related to the sale of bank property in Jacksonville, Florida, is well-documented in the Washington, D.C., and Florida (Reel 1, Frame 0185–Reel 2, Frame 0246) folders.

Personal wills account for much of the correspondence, giving researchers access to information regarding estates and inheritances. In the years after the Freedman's bank collapsed, depositors sought to receive dividend payments owed to them. In the event of a depositor's death, the heirs were required to submit a sworn affidavit, attesting to their authenticity as descendants of the depositor. At times, questionnaires were administered to heirs for comparison to records on file at the various branches that verified veracity.

Miscellaneous papers conclude the correspondence. Several annual reports on the financial state of the company provide further institutional history of the bank (Reel 10, Frame 0520).

Loan papers compose the second series. These documents, almost all deeds of trust, are arranged alphabetically by last name in Reels 11–20. Property deeds account for most of the loan papers. The deeds of trust convey property in Washington, D.C., and several other cities, from depositors to the commissioners, from commissioners to depositors, from branch to branch, and between individual depositors. Several equity cases are among the legal disputes covered in this section. Property tax vouchers and insurance policies also deserve attention in this series. Detailed policies of numerous fire insurance companies, ranging from the American Fire Insurance Company (Reel 18, Frame 0309) to the German American Fire Insurance Company (Reel 20, Frame 0723), are included in the loan papers. Among the principal correspondents in this series are attorneys William L. Trenholm, Enoch Totten, Brainard H. Warner, William H. Lockwood, and John Dixon.

The third series consists of bank books of individual depositors and various private organizations. Bank books appear in alphabetical order, first grouped by city (Reel 21, Frame 0001–Reel 23, Frame 0290; Reel 24) and then by individual (Reel 23, Frames 0291–1004).

Beginning with bank books on file at the Alexandria branch (Reel 21, Frame 0001) through the Shreveport branch (Reel 23, Frame 0160), and ending with the Wilmington branch (Reel 24, Frame 0572), passbooks are listed under each branch in the order filmed by account name. The surviving records from branch banks at Lexington, Louisville, Norfolk, Shreveport, and Washington, D.C., contain the greatest number of bank books.

Following the collapse of the bank in 1874, depositors wishing to collect dividend payments had to mail in their bank books to Washington, D.C. About half of the 61,131 depositors, particularly holders of large accounts, returned their passbooks to the three commissioners. Some depositors had either moved or died and therefore could not be contacted. Individual passbooks begin with Harriet Walker's bank book held at the Vicksburg branch (Reel 23, Frame 0291) and continue through Beth Hayward's bank book on record in Savannah (Reel 23, Frame 1004). Some bank books belong to various organizations and associations, as in the United States Sons of Honor bank book at the New Orleans branch (Reel 23, Frame 0664). Although most bank books contain little information on items of personal consumption, the researcher may distill spending patterns in the African American community, along with a general impression of the financial status of certain individuals following the Civil War.

EDITORIAL NOTE

Among the “Letters Received” in Part 1: Correspondence, Loans, and Bank Books, researchers will find numerous handwritten letters, passbooks, and questionnaires that were sent to commissioners regarding individual accounts and dividend payments. Also interspersed among these files are legal papers, dividend checks, payrolls, vouchers, loan papers, and deeds. While most of the information found in the letters received relates to liquidation of the bank, the records contain a wealth of genealogical data concerning depositors and their heirs. In some cases, these records may be the only records available that document an ancestor's relations with the Freedman's bank.

The correspondence and loan papers in Part 1 were originally tri-folded and the documents reflect this “folded” nature. A very small amount of text in a few documents may be illegible. But every technical effort has been made to increase legibility of the original documents. The documents have been microfilmed as they are arranged at the National Archives.

The correspondence portion of Part 1, comprising Reels 1 through 10, has been arranged by correspondent's and/or branch bank's location by state. Washington, D.C., has been included, on Reels 6–10, and comprises the largest amount of documentation. On Reel 3, there are documents relating to Mississippi mixed with the Minnesota documents. A small amount of correspondence filed together and labeled “Correspondence: 1920–1930” has been filmed in this microform publication. Documents relate to requests for information and claims pertaining to earlier correspondence.

The Loan Papers included in Part 1, comprising Reels 11 through 20, have been arranged alphabetically by loan applicant.

The Bank Books included in Part 1 comprise Reels 21 through 24. Generally, the arrangement of the books is alphabetical by city and state of the bank branch. But there are a number of bank books on Reel 23 that have been arranged alphabetically by depositor's surname. Reel 24 returns to the alphabetical-by-location arrangement.

REEL INDEX

The following is a list of the folders that compose The Freedman's Savings and Trust Company: Letters Received by the Commissioners, 1870–1914, Part 1: Correspondence, Loans, and Bank Books. The four-digit number on the far left is the frame at which a particular file folder begins. The file title follows the frame number. Substantive issues are highlighted under the heading Major Topics, as are prominent correspondents under the heading Principal Correspondents. Major Topics and Principal Correspondents are listed in order of first appearance and each topic or correspondent is listed only once for each folder.

PRINCIPAL CORRESPONDENTS INDEX

The following index is a guide to the principal correspondents in this microform publication. The first number after an entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which the subject begins. Hence, 3: 0331 directs the researcher to Frame 0331 of Reel 3. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find major topics and principal correspondents listed in the order in which they appear on the film. This index reflects the terminology and spellings used in the original documents.

DEEDS AND CONVEYANCES INDEX

The following index is an alphabetical listing by name of the deeds and conveyances contained in the this microfilm publication. The first number after an entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which the subject begins. Hence, 12: 0512 directs the researcher to Frame 0512 of Reel 12. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find topics listed in the order in which they appear on the film. This index reflects the terminology and spellings used in the original documents.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics in this microform publication. The first number after an entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which the subject begins. Hence, 1: 0949 directs the researcher to Frame 0949 of Reel 1. The indexer uses "see also" references when there are at least three reel and frame citations. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find topics listed in the order in which they appear on the film. This index reflects the terminology and spellings used in the original documents.
