SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection from the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library in Austin, Texas, reproduces White House Central Files on the War on Poverty programs. On January 8, 1964, President Lyndon Baines Johnson called for a war on poverty in his State of the Union address and continued this crusade until he left office in 1969. Committed to significantly reducing the number of America's poor population, the Johnson administration endeavored to define the problem of poverty and take legislative action to eradicate it. The documents in this collection reflect the scope and strategy of the president's ambitious mission, which remained unfulfilled at the end of the 1960s.

From the Executive Office in the White House, many presidential advisers assisted in waging the War on Poverty during President Johnson's second term. Much of this microfilm collection is correspondence to and from presidential aides, including Joseph A. Califano Jr., Douglass Cater, Robert E. Kintner, Bill D. Moyers, Lawrence F. O'Brien, R. Sargent Shriver, Jack Valenti, W. Marvin Watson, and Henry Hall Wilson Jr. In addition to correspondence, the collection consists of memoranda, informal notes, working drafts, speeches, and newspaper and periodical clippings, primarily from 1964 to 1969.

The White House Central Files contain extensive records on the successes and setbacks of the War on Poverty programs, filed under Welfare (WE) and Poverty Program folder headings. Grouped by date ranges, the Central Files document the organization and activities of President Johnson's Great Society and the public reaction to the agenda. Leading the attack in the War on Poverty, the Office for Economic Opportunity (OEO) appears often in the Central Files, since the agency administered many domestic initiatives, including Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA), Head Start, Job Corps, Community Action Program, Neighborhood Youth Corps, and Summer Youth Programs. At the outset of the War on Poverty initiative, the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 established the OEO, which reported directly to President Johnson.

For researchers interested in the Johnson White House, this collection offers an excellent view into the poverty-related issues handled by this presidency. The heart of these White House Central Files is the Great Society poverty program presented in materials from Reel 6, Frame 0095 through Reel 17, Frame 0001. Documents provide information on the progress of OEO antipoverty projects in various localities, including Fresno and San Diego Counties of California, Indianapolis, D.C., Philadelphia, New Bedford, and New York City. Numerous materials in this collection pertain to the commitment of the Job Corps and the Neighborhood Youth Corps to provide jobs, training, and education for underprivileged youth and school dropouts. Documents on the Great Society's efforts to alleviate the problems in the chronically distressed region of Appalachia can be found in this edition.

Documents on Reels 17 and 18 focus on the goals and services of Head Start, established to provide a range of developmental and educational assistance for disadvantaged preschool children. Considered an innovative program, Head Start received a great deal of national publicity and was a particular favorite of President Johnson. Folders include materials on the government investigations into the association of civil rights and black power groups with the Child Development Group of Mississippi, a pioneer of the Head Start program.

This collection contains citizen correspondence initiated by the congressional budgets that proposed cutbacks to antipoverty spending in the closing years of the Johnson administration. Although the antipoverty legislation stirred controversy from the beginning, many letters from individuals and organizations express support for the programs and concern over the loss in government funding. Further weakened by the presidential victory of Richard Nixon in November 1968, the War on Poverty underwent organizational restructuring by the Republican administration in the 1970s when OEO programs were transferred to other agencies. Materials in the White House Central Files reveal the Republican Party's opposition to President Johnson's expansion of government's role in social welfare programs. This collection gathers documents pertaining to the Republican proposal of an alternative antipoverty agenda shifting the responsibility for economic assistance to the private sector.

This edition represents the fifth of five parts of files on The War on Poverty, 1964–1968, microfilmed by LexisNexis from the Papers of Lyndon B. Johnson held by the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library, National Archives and Records Administration. Part 1 is White House Central Files, and Part 2 is Records of the President's National Advisory Commission on Rural Poverty, 1966–1967. Parts 3 and 4 are White House Aides' Files.
