INTRODUCTION

The impact of the ante-bellum southern plantations on the lives of their black and white inhabitants, as well as on the political, economic, and cultural life of the South as a whole, is one of the most fascinating and controversial problems of present-day American historical research. Depending upon the labor of slaves who constituted the great majority of the American black population, the plantations were both homes and business enterprises for a white southern elite. They were the largest, the most commercialized, and on the whole, the most efficient and specialized agricultural enterprises of their day, producing the bulk of the South's staple crops of tobacco, cotton, sugar, rice, and hemp. Their proprietors were entrepreneurs who aspired to and sometimes, after a generation or two, achieved the status of a cultivated landed aristocracy. Many distinguished themselves not only as successful planters but in the professions, in the military, in government service, and in scientific and cultural endeavors.

Planters ambitious to augment their wealth, together with their black slaves, were an important driving force in the economic and political development of new territories and states in the Southwest. As the plantations spread, their impact on local, state, and national affairs grew apace. Their commodities accounted for more than half the nation's exports, and the plantations themselves were important markets for the products of northern industry. In short, they played a crucial role in the development of a national market economy.

The plantations of the Old South, the white families who owned, operated, and lived on them, and the blacks who toiled on them as slaves for more than two centuries, have been the subjects of numerous historical studies since the pioneering work of Ulrich B. Phillips in the early twentieth century. The literature, highly controversial, has focused on questions such as the evolution and nature of the planter class and its role in shaping the white South's economy, culture, and values; the conditions of life experienced by American blacks in slavery; the impact of the "peculiar institution" on their personalities and the degree to which a distinct Afro-American culture developed among them; and, finally, the sources of the tension between the proslavery interests of the South and the "free labor" interests of the North that culminated in secession and civil war.

Research materials are plentiful. Census returns and other government documents, newspapers and periodicals, travelers' accounts, memoirs and autobiographies, and an abundance of polemical literature have much to tell historians about life on ante-bellum plantations. The autobiographies of former slaves, several twentieth-century oral history collections, and a rich record of songs and folklore are significant sources for the black experience in slavery. All the historical literature, however, from Phillips to the most recent studies, has relied heavily on the enormous collections of manuscript plantation records that survive in research libraries scattered throughout the South. These manuscripts consist of business records, account books, slave lists, overseers' reports, diaries, private letters exchanged among family members and friends, and even an occasional letter written by a literate slave. They come mostly from the larger tobacco, cotton, sugar, and rice plantations, but a significant number survive from the more modest estates and smaller slaveholdings whose economic operations tended to be less specialized.

Plantation records illuminate nearly every aspect of plantation life. Not only business operations and day-to-day labor routines, but family affairs, the roles of women, racial attitudes, relations between masters and slaves, social and cultural life, the values shared by members of the planter class, and the tensions and anxieties that were inseparable from a slave society all are revealed with a fullness and candor unmatched by any of the other available sources. Moreover, these records are immensely valuable for studies of black slavery. Needless to say, since they were compiled by members of the white master class, they provide little direct evidence of the inner feelings and private lives of the slave population. But they are the best sources of information about the care and treatment of slaves, about problems in the management of slave labor, and about forms of slave resistance short of open rebellion. They also tell us much about the behavior of slaves, from which historians can at least draw inferences about the impact of slavery on the minds and personalities of its black victims.

Deposited in southern state archives and in the libraries of many southern universities and historical societies, the number of available plantation records has increased significantly in recent decades. Our publication is designed to assist scholars in their use by offering for the first time an ample selection of the most important materials in a single microfilm collection. Ultimately it will cover each geographical area in which the plantation flourished, with additions of approximately four new collections annually. A special effort is being made to offer the rarer records of the smaller slaveholders and to include the equally rare records of the plantations in the last quarter of the eighteenth century. However, the documentation is most abundant for the operations of the larger plantations in the period between the War of 1812 and the Civil War, and their records will constitute the bulk of our publication.

NOTE ON SOURCES

The collection microfilmed in this edition is from the holdings of the Southern Historical Collection, Manuscripts Department, Library of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Chapel Hill, North Carolina 27599. Historical maps, microfilmed among the introductory materials, were made available courtesy of the Map Division of the Library of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The description of the collection provided in this user guide is adapted from the Inventory to the Cameron Family Papers, compiled by Marion Hirsch and Lisa Tolbert. That inventory is included with the introductory materials on Reel 1 of the microfilm.

EDITORIAL NOTE

The User Guide for this edition provides a précis of each collection through 1865. The précis provides information on family history, principal crops, the slave force, and many business and personal activities documented in the collection. Omissions from the microfilm edition are noted below, in the précis, and on the microfilm.

Following the précis, a Reel Index itemizes each file folder and manuscript volume. The four-digit number to the left of each entry indicates the frame number on the microfilm where the document or series of documents begins.

Introductory materials microfilmed at the beginning of Reel 1 are not assigned frame numbers although the pages in the inventory provided by the Southern Historical Collection are numbered. That inventory includes a description of the entire Cameron Family Papers, 1757–1978.

Historical maps, microfilmed among the introductory materials, are courtesy of the Map Division of the Library of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The map of North Carolina is that of Jonathan Price and John Strother, 1808. The map of Virginia is that of A. Finley, 1824. The map of Alabama is that of S. Augustus Mitchell, 1847. The map of Mississippi is that of Thomas Cowperthwait & Co., 1850.

Pictures in the introductory materials are selections from Series 7 of the Cameron Family Papers at the Southern Historical Collection. The pictures include etchings of Duncan Cameron and Paul C. Cameron and an etching and photograph of Fairtosh, the residence of the Camerons.

Omissions from the microfilm include Series 3, Duncan Cameron's Legal Papers, 1797–1837, and Subseries 6.10, Legal Volumes, 1793–1812. These voluminous materials documenting court cases and the practice of law are omitted in their entirety, as the material contained therein is beyond the scope of this publication. Series 7, Pictures, is omitted because many items would not reproduce on microfilm, although four pictures, noted above, are microfilmed among the introductory materials.

Postbellum papers omitted include correspondence, May 1865–1935; family financial and legal papers, May 1865–1942; invitations and calling cards, 1866–1896; and volumes, 1870–1898. Post-1865 records will be microfilmed as part of a subsequent UPA microfilm series, Records of Southern Plantations from 1866 to 1920.

Two typescript volumes compiled under the auspices of the North Carolina Division of Archives and History by Jean B. Anderson, 1977–1978, are also omitted. These monographs focusing on Stagville and Fairtosh Plantations are superseded by Jean B. Anderson, Piedmont Plantation: The Bennehan-Cameron Family and Lands in North Carolina (Durham, North Carolina: Historic Preservation Society of Durham, 1985). Researchers are encouraged to refer to that volume for additional information on the collection and the Bennehans and Camerons.

Four related manuscript collections exist among the holdings of the Southern History Collection, Manuscripts Department, Library of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. These include the Bennehan Cameron Papers, acc. 3623; the Thomas Ruffin Papers, acc. 641; the George W. Mordecai Papers, acc. 522; and the Charles Dewey Papers, acc. 216.

Researchers should also note that Richard Bennehan's home and some of the outbuildings including slave dormitories are open to the public. Visits may be arranged through the Stagville Center, an agency of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, P.O. Box 71217, Durham, North Carolina, 27722–1217.

REEL INDEX

Cameron Family Papers, 1757–1865, Orange, Wake, Person, and Granville Counties, North Carolina; also Alabama, Mississippi, and Virginia

Description of the Collection

The Cameron family was one of ante-bellum North Carolina's wealthiest families. On the eve of the Civil War, Paul C. Cameron (1808–1891) and his siblings owned over 1,000 slaves and nearly 30,000 acres of land in North Carolina, as well as plantations in Alabama and Mississippi. Their father, Duncan Cameron (1777–1853), had been a prominent lawyer, judge, banker, and plantation owner who made his fortune and married in North Carolina after leaving his native Virginia. Duncan's father-in-law Richard Bennehan (1743–1825), a merchant and planter, had earlier emigrated from Virginia to the Old North State, where he found wealth and a wife. The collection charts the rise of the family during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries and illustrates many facets of life in the colony, the state, the region, and the nation. Major themes in the collection include African-American slavery, agriculture, banking, commerce, economic conditions, education, family life, finance, horse breeding, law, medicine, plantation life, politics, religion, social history, transportation improvements, travel, westward migration, and women's history.

The bulk of the collection consists of correspondence, financial and legal documents, and manuscript volumes. In addition there are speeches, writings, printed materials, and miscellaneous other types of personal papers. The collection comprises seven series, of which five were microfilmed.

Historical Note

Richard Bennehan was born on April 15, 1743, near Warsaw, Richmond County, Virginia. He was the fifth child of Rachel and Dudley Bennehan, modest landowners of Irish extraction. Dudley Bennehan died when Richard was only six, and did not leave any of his estate to Richard. Instead, Richard was apprenticed to a local merchant. In 1762 he moved to Petersburg where he was employed by Edward Stabler, a commission merchant.

In 1768 William Johnston, a North Carolina backcountry merchant and landowner, offered Bennehan a one-third partnership in the Little River Store located on Johnston's Snowhill plantation near Hillsborough in Orange County, North Carolina. The store was on the heavily travelled Indian Trading Path that ran through Piedmont, Georgia, North Carolina, and Virginia. Bennehan accepted the offer and moved to North Carolina in late 1768 or early 1769. Because of the store's excellent location and Bennehan's able management, the business prospered. Around 1776 he began to invest in land and slaves and in 1776 or 1777 he married Mary Amis, of Northampton County, North Carolina, who also owned land and slaves inherited from her father. Their first home was Brick House, a plantation formerly owned by Tyree Harris, the sheriff of Orange County. Bennehan decided to open his own store in 1785 after the death of William Johnston. He bought property from Judith Stagg and opened what was known as the Stagville Store, also on the Indian Trading Path in Orange County (present-day Durham County, North Carolina). Bennehan built a modest plantation house near the store and the family moved from Brick House to Stagville.

As a prosperous merchant and landowner, Bennehan was active in the civic life of North Carolina. He was a patriot in the Revolution and a close friend of William Richardson Davie, a war hero and governor of the state. Through his association with Davie, Bennehan became an early supporter of the University of North Carolina, donating books and supplies, as well as serving on the university's Board of Visitors and Board of Trustees. Bennehan also served on the commission that planned the new state capitol building in Raleigh.

Richard and Mary (Amis) Bennehan had two children, Rebecca (1778–1843) and Thomas D. (1782–1847). Rebecca was educated at home. When she married Duncan Cameron in 1803, her father gave the newlywed couple land adjoining the Stagville plantation where Duncan Cameron built Fairtosh, a grand plantation house. Thomas was one of the first students at the University of North Carolina, which he entered in 1795 as a student in the preparatory school. Upon receiving his degree in 1801, he returned to Stagville to help his father manage the store and plantation. Thomas Bennehan never married. After his father died in 1825, he inherited the Stagville lands and continued to live there, managing the store and plantation until his death in 1847. Thomas's mother had died in 1812.

Duncan Cameron was born on December 15, 1777, in Mecklenburg County, Virginia. His father John Cameron was an Anglican minister and a recent immigrant from Scotland who had married well. John Cameron's wife was Ann Owen Nash, a daughter of Colonel Thomas Nash, one of the King's attorneys. Her uncle Abner Nash was a governor of North Carolina during the Revolution, her uncle Francis Nash was a general in the Revolution, and her maternal grandfather was Colonel Clement Read, a King's attorney.

Duncan Cameron was educated by his father, who in addition to being a minister ran several academies in the parishes he served in Virginia. After studying the law under Paul Carrington, Duncan Cameron was licensed to practice in 1797. He immediately moved to North Carolina, first to Warrenton, then Martinsville, finally settling in Hillsborough in 1799. Cameron was an ambitious and capable lawyer who soon prospered. Like Bennehan, Duncan Cameron invested in land and slaves.

Cameron's success as a lawyer marked him for the bench and he served as superior court judge from 1814 to 1816. He also served several terms in the North Carolina House in 1806, 1807, 1812, and 1813. He then served three terms in the state Senate in 1819, 1822, and 1823. While in the Senate Cameron served as chairman of the influential Committee on Internal Improvements, which had originally been led by Cameron's friend Archibald Murphey. Duncan Cameron's civic service was not limited to politics and law. In 1812 he was appointed major general of the North Carolina Militia and served in that capacity until 1814. He, like Bennehan, was a devoted friend of the University of North Carolina, serving on the Board of Trustees from 1802 to 1853.

Cameron was instrumental in the development of the Episcopal Church in North Carolina in the 1820s. In 1833 he bought the defunct Episcopal School for Boys in Raleigh, reestablishing it with the Reverend Aldert Smedes as its director. In 1841 the school became St. Mary's, an Episcopal girls' school, with Reverend Aldert Smedes again as director. The school remained in Cameron family hands until it was sold to the Episcopal Diocese of North Carolina in 1897. Duncan Cameron also helped to establish Christ Church in Raleigh and built Salem Chapel at Fairtosh, which provided a place for family and slaves to worship.

When the State Bank of North Carolina formed in 1811, Duncan Cameron was one of its first directors, and in 1829 he accepted its presidency. Later the bank was dissolved and reformed as the Bank of the State of North Carolina. Cameron served as president of the new bank from 1834 until his resignation in 1849.

Cameron was also a successful businessman. He formed a number of partnerships with various family members to run stores in North Carolina and Virginia. The most important of these partnerships were those with his father-in-law Richard Bennehan and brother-in-law Thomas D. Bennehan. The first was a limited partnership drawn in 1806 giving Thomas D. Bennehan and Duncan Cameron a share in the management and profits of the store, opened by Richard Bennehan in 1802, at Fishdam Ford on the Neuse River. The second partnership, drawn in 1807, was more extensive. It combined the Bennehan and Cameron plantations, slaves, stores, and flour and saw mills into one powerful and profitable enterprise. The plantations and stores were managed by the Bennehans, while Cameron provided his legal and financial expertise to the business. Cameron was also involved in a partnership beginning in 1802 with his step-nephew George Anderson, establishing a store in Hillsborough, which later was moved to Martinsville, Virginia. In the 1810s Cameron started a commission merchant firm in Petersburg with his brother, William Cameron, and Samuel Snow. These and other business ventures of Duncan Cameron were largely unsuccessful unlike the lucrative partnership with Richard and Thomas D. Bennehan.

Rebecca and Duncan Cameron had eight children: Mary Anne born in 1804, Thomas Amis Dudley in 1806, Paul Carrington in 1808, Margaret Bain in 1811, Rebecca Bennehan in 1813, Jean Syme in 1815, Anne Owen in 1817, and Mildred Coles born in 1820. Of the eight children, only Paul and Margaret married.

The Cameron girls were educated at home by governesses, the most popular of whom was Mary McLean Bryant, corresponding with the family long after she left the Cameron's employ. Only Mary Anne, the eldest, went to school. She attended Jacob Mordecai's seminary in Warrenton, North Carolina, from 1814 to 1818. Mary Anne, Rebecca, Jean, and Anne contracted tuberculosis. Despite trips to various springs and a journey to South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida, made in hopes of curing or arresting the disease, the girls succumbed one by one during 1840. Mildred escaped tuberculosis, but fell prey to an undiagnosed disease that left her partially paralyzed. She travelled to Philadelphia and New York to consult with doctors about a cure, but the doctors' efforts were to no avail. Mildred remained an invalid throughout her adult life, with the burden of her care falling on her sister Margaret. Mildred died in 1881. Following the death of her mother in 1843, Margaret Bain Cameron lived at home until she was forty-two, caring for her sick siblings and her ailing father and managing the household. Then, upon the death of her father in 1853, she married George W. Mordecai, president of the State Bank of North Carolina, who had succeeded Duncan Cameron when he resigned the post in 1849. Margaret and George Mordecai were childless except for a stillbirth in 1854. Even after her marriage, Margaret continued to care for her sister Mildred. She accompanied Mildred on medical consultations to Philadelphia and New York, which took Margaret away from her husband for months at a time.

Paul and Thomas had a number of tutors including Willie P. Mangum. Educating Thomas, who suffered from a learning dysfunction, proved difficult. In 1813 he was sent to Lunenburg, Virginia, to attend his grandfather John Cameron's school. In 1820 he was sent to John Rudd's school in Elizabethtown, New Jersey. In 1824 he went to Captain Partridge's school in Norwich, Vermont, which was later moved to Middletown, Connecticut. Although he served as postmaster of the Stagville Post Office during the 1830s and lived until 1870, Thomas Cameron remained dependent on his family throughout his life. Paul attended a number of schools as well. First he went to the Hillsborough Academy. He started preparatory school at the University of North Carolina in 1824, but was expelled for fighting in 1825. He then joined his brother at Captain Partridge's school. Finally, Paul attended Washington College (now Trinity College) in Hartford, Connecticut, graduating in 1829.

Duncan Cameron hoped that his son Paul would become a lawyer. Although Paul read law and passed the bar in 1832, he was not interested in law. He was interested in agriculture and his ambition was to move to the Deep South and become a cotton planter. However, to please his father, he set up a law practice in Hillsborough. In 1832 he married Anne Ruffin, daughter of Thomas Ruffin, the noted jurist. At first the newlyweds lived in a house in Hillsborough. However, in 1837 Paul resigned from the bar and the young couple moved to Fairtosh so that Paul could take over the management of the Cameron plantations. By this time Fairtosh was unoccupied, as Duncan and Rebecca (Bennehan) Cameron had moved to Raleigh permanently in 1836, following his appointment as president of the State Bank of North Carolina.

Paul and Anne (Ruffin) Cameron lived at Fairtosh from 1837 until the late 1850s, when they moved back to Hillsborough. During the years at Fairtosh, Paul Cameron improved the Cameron lands and added to them. Paul also inherited the Stagville plantation and slaves upon the death of his uncle Thomas Bennehan, in 1847. In the 1840s he purchased a cotton plantation in Greene County, Alabama, and in the 1850s he purchased another cotton plantation in Tunica County, Mississippi. Paul Cameron was known as an enthusiastic agricultural reformer, and he was a founding member of North Carolina's earliest agricultural society. Cameron was also involved in forming railroads in the state. In the early 1850s he contracted to build a large section of the North Carolina Railroad. He served on the board of directors of the North Carolina Railroad and was elected president in 1861. Additionally, he was a director of the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad and the Raleigh and Augusta Airline. Although Paul Cameron was not as politically active as his father, he ran for a seat in the state senate in 1856 and was elected. He was defeated, however, when he ran for a second term. Paul Cameron did not serve in the Confederate Army.

Paul and Anne (Ruffin) Cameron had a dozen children. Two were stillborn, two died in infancy, and one died at age eleven. The remaining offspring, however, survived childhood, matured, and married. Rebecca, born in 1840, married Walker Anderson in 1863, then married John Graham in 1867. Anne, born in 1842, married George P. Collins in 1860. Margaret, born in 1848, married Robert B. Peebles. Pauline married William Shepard and lived in Edenton. After Pauline's death, her sister Mildred Coles married William Shepard. Duncan, born in 1850, and Bennehan, born in 1854, were too young to serve in the Confederate Army and were in school during the Civil War. Duncan married Mary Short and Bennehan married Sally Mayo. Paul Cameron died in 1891 leaving his vast fortune to his wife, his remaining son Bennehan, and his daughters.

Correspondence

Correspondence, 1757–April 1865 and undated, is the largest series in the collection. Six subseries are included. Subseries 1.1 contains correspondence of Richard Bennehan and his family, 1757–1796. Subseries 1.2 contains correspondence of Richard Bennehan, Duncan Cameron, and their families, 1797–1825. Subseries 1.3 contains correspondence of Thomas Bennehan and of Duncan Cameron and his family, 1826–1852. Subseries 1.4 contains correspondence of Paul C. Cameron, Margaret Bain (Cameron) Mordecai, and their families, 1853–April 1865. Subseries 1.7 contains undated outgoing correspondence, and Subseries 1.8 contains undated incoming correspondence. Many of the topics highlighted in the correspondence may also be found in other series of the collection.

Business and personal correspondence of Richard Bennehan, his son Thomas Bennehan, his daughter Rebecca Bennehan, and his wife Mary (Amis) Bennehan. Subseries 1.1. During the years covered by this subseries (1757–1796), Richard Bennehan worked for Edward Stabler, was in business with William Johnston, and was in business for himself. The material in this subseries predates the arrival of Duncan Cameron in North Carolina. The bulk of the early material consists of business letters to Richard Bennehan from his partner William Johnston of Hillsborough, North Carolina, with whom Bennehan owned the Little River Store, and from Bennehan's factor and former employer, Edward Stabler of Petersburg, Virginia. Among Bennehan's other business correspondents are merchants David Buchanan of Petersburg, John Alston of Glasgow, Scotland, James Gibson of Suffolk, Virginia, and Andrew Miller of Halifax, North Carolina.

Letters chiefly focus on various aspects of the mercantile business, particularly on market conditions, transportation problems, counterfeit money, and prices for tobacco, hams, sugar, rum, salt, and wheat. However, reference is made to the War of Regulation, the American Revolution, the U.S. Constitution, slavery, and economic conditions. A letter dated June 9, 1771, from William Johnston anticipates Governor Tryon's arrival in Hillsborough following the Battle of Alamance. On September 8, 1771, Johnston wrote Bennehan regarding a slave of Bennehan's named Jack who visited John Douglass "wanting him to buy him, Jack said he understood if you did not dispose of him soon, you would send him to some other part of the country to be sold therefore was very desirous to live with him." Bennehan's participation as a militiaman in the Battle of Moore's Creek Bridge is mentioned in a letter to James Martin dated February 15, 1776. In that letter, Bennehan also comments "it is said Negroes have some thoughts of freedom, pray make Scrub sleep in the house every night and that the overseer keep in Tom." William Johnston's death in 1785 is documented, as is Bennehan's subsequent purchase of the Stagville property and the building of the Stagville Store in 1787.

Business letters written to Richard Bennehan after 1789 consist primarily of letters from Ebenezer Stott and David Buchanan, both of Petersburg, Virginia, who were Bennehan's factors during the 1790s. These letters frequently include statements of account in addition to the usual discussion of market conditions and general economic and social news.

Some letters are to Richard and Mary (Amis) Bennehan from her brother Thomas Amis. Two letters of January 1793, between Richard-Ray and Richard Bennehan, contain Ray's declaration of attachment for Bennehan's daughter and Bennehan's disapprobation. Among Bennehan's other correspondents are Jesse Benton, William Richardson Davie, Thomas Hart, Allen Jones, Nathaniel Rochester, and Samuel Ashe. A letter from Ashe, dated July 13, 1796, documents Bennehan's gift of books to the library at the University of North Carolina. Also in this period are numerous letters referring to horse breeding, agriculture, slavery, and financial matters.

Thomas Bennehan's correspondence with his parents dates from 1795, when Thomas left for Chapel Hill, to 1801 when he graduated from the University of North Carolina. Letters between Thomas and his sister Rebecca are particularly numerous. There is only one letter from Mary (Amis) Bennehan to her son, but there are frequent exchanges between father and son. There are also several letters to Thomas from his classmates, including his cousin Thomas G. Amis.

In this first subseries there are a few letters addressed to Duncan Cameron prior to his departure from Virginia. Some letters are also addressed to William Nash of Hillsborough and Mary Witherspoon of New Bern.

Business and personal correspondence of Richard Bennehan, Thomas Bennehan, Mary (Amis) Bennehan, Duncan Cameron, and Rebecca (Bennehan) Cameron. Subseries 1.2. During the years covered by this subseries (1797–1825), Duncan Cameron established his law practice in North Carolina, married Rebecca Bennehan, and went into partnership with Richard and Thomas Bennehan. Letters up to 1810 are directed chiefly to Richard Bennehan and Duncan Cameron. Later letters are chiefly addressed to Duncan Cameron and Thomas Bennehan. This subseries ends with the death of Richard Bennehan.

Richard Bennehan's business correspondence includes many letters from his Petersburg factor Ebenezer Stott. There are also letters from other merchants, as well as from Bennehan's friends William Richardson Davie, Jesse Benton, Samuel Ashe, Robert Williams, Joseph Caldwell, and Richard Henderson. On February 2, 1802, William Richardson Davie wrote to Bennehan regarding a young Negro woman of his who had been apprehended by Bennehan. Davie asked him to relay a threat: "tell her for me that if she ever runs away again, I will send her to Georgia." A nephew of Richard Bennehan, William Bennehan, moved from Virginia to North Carolina in the 1790s, working first at the Stagville Store and later at the Fishdam Ford Store, until his death in 1806.

There are letters regarding horse breeding from members of the Amis family of Halifax and Northhampton counties, North Carolina, as well as from others. The Amises were relatives by marriage of Richard Bennehan and were prominent horsemen. Sir Archie was a stud horse in the Amis stable. This stallion, who had been a star racing thoroughbred, was later owned by and stood at stud for the Bennehans and Camerons. The bloodlines of this horse were a foundation for later Bennehan and Cameron horses and are credited with providing a foundation for the modern American Thoroughbred.

Letters between Richard and Thomas Bennehan concern plantation and business affairs and social and family matters. Later letters concern Richard's trips to various springs in Virginia and North Carolina. Other correspondence of Thomas Bennehan includes letters while he and a cousin, Thomas G. Amis, were students at the University of North Carolina. Amis worked on merchant ships in the West Indies after graduation. His letters to Thomas Bennehan describe the life of a seafarer and life in the West Indies, particularly on the islands of Guadeloupe, Hispaniola, and Martinique. Amis describes the treatment by the French Revolutionary government of black native forces on the islands including accounts of massacres and incidents leading up to the slave rebellions in the West Indies during the first decade of the nineteenth century. Amis also expressed his personal perceptions and aversion to slavery in the United States and elsewhere.

Duncan Cameron was another frequent correspondent of the Bennehans, first as a lawyer, then as a suitor of Rebecca Bennehan, and finally as a family member and partner in the plantation and store enterprises. Letters from him to Richard and Thomas Bennehan discuss plantation matters, business interests, and family and social matters. Extensive correspondence from the Bennehans to Duncan Cameron similarly discusses those topics. Cameron was involved in a duel in April 1803.

Other family correspondence of Duncan Cameron includes that of Rebecca (Bennehan) Cameron. Rebecca corresponded with her brother and others prior to her marriage in 1803. Letters written by Rebecca to her husband while he was away on legal, business, or political ventures are typically brief, but contain many references to slaves and plantation matters, as well as descriptions of family and social affairs. Rebecca's correspondence also served as a conduit for messages from visitors to Fairtosh relating to Duncan's legal practice and other matters, as well as for abstracts of incoming correspondence. From 1814 to 1818 Rebecca also received regular letters from her eldest daughter Mary Anne Cameron who attended the Mordecai Female Seminary in Warrenton, North Carolina. Notes from Mary Anne's teachers about her deportment and scholastic progress often accompany her letters to her mother. Mary Anne also periodically wrote to her brothers and to her father. Mary Anne also was the subject of a poem from G. Crawford on April 30, 1823.

The education of the Cameron sons Paul and Thomas is also documented. In 1813, letters from Rev. John Cameron concern his attempts to teach his grandson Thomas at his academy in Lunenburg, Virginia. Letters from Willie P. Mangum in 1814 and 1815 document his tenure as a tutor for Thomas and Paul Cameron at Fairtosh. After 1820, letters from John Rudd at his school in Elizabethtown, New Jersey, detail his efforts to teach Thomas, whose progress he feared would never be rapid. Letters of 1824 and 1825 from Captain Partridge concern the educations of Thomas and, later, Paul at his academies in Vermont and Connecticut. Letters from Paul to family members document his progress and general sentiments on education and his northern tenure. Thomas Cameron writes only a couple of crude letters, evidence of a learning dysfunction that followed him throughout his life.

Duncan Cameron and his wife both received extensive correspondence from his siblings, Mary Read (Cameron) Anderson, William Cameron, and Jean (Cameron) Syme, of Petersburg, Virginia. Another brother, John Adams Cameron, also wrote frequently from Fayetteville, North Carolina. Thomas Cameron, also a brother, wrote periodically from Philadelphia, where he attended medical school, from which he graduated in 1816. John and Mary Owen (Nash) Cameron wrote to their son Duncan from their home in Lunenburg, Virginia. Family correspondence includes many references to slaves, plantation affairs, and business matters, as well as information on family matters, education, health, religion, and social activities. In a letter of March 28, 1807, Mary R. Anderson refers to slaves being overheard in conversation plotting to poison their father, John Cameron; they also had set fire to his home sometime previously. Substantial correspondence from Mary Anderson during this period concerns the settlement of the estate of her husband and the education of her children. Letters from William Cameron and John A. Cameron frequently refer to the shipment of plantation supplies and produce, the activities of slaves and overseers, and general economic matters and social conditions.

In addition to Duncan Cameron's voluminous family correspondence, there is also substantial correspondence dealing with his legal practice, judgeship, and various business partnerships. There are many letters from mercantile businesses on the Eastern Seaboard who employed Cameron as lawyer, primarily to collect debts on their behalf. There are also letters from merchants and factors from whom Cameron bought goods to stock stores he owned and to whom he supplied cotton, hams, tobacco, and wheat grown on the Bennehan and Cameron lands. He also accepted these items as payment for goods at the Bennehan and Cameron stores. Frequent merchant correspondents include Rogers and Winthrop of New York; Ebenezer Stott of Petersburg; Roger Lamberth of New York; Pattison Hartshorne of Philadelphia; McEwen, Hale, and Davidson of Philadelphia; John MacMillian of Fayetteville; John Hogg of Wilmington; Edward Lyde of New York; Robert Walker of Petersburg; W. Haxell of Petersburg; John Thompkins of Richmond; and John and James Dunlop of England. James Bruce of Halifax, Virginia, was an occasional client and correspondent of Cameron.

Legal correspondence sheds significant light on economic and social matters in the region, as well as court procedures, debt collections, and slave and property laws. Cameron received frequent letters from debtors including one letter of April 12, 1802, written from Wake Prison, where the debtor despaired of ever achieving the means of earning his release. A letter from Nathaniel Rochester on September 9, 1805, referred to the death of their friend Major Anton, who emancipated his slaves and left them something to support the aged and children. A letter from John M. Goodloe on January 15, 1807, provides information on slave life and plantation protocols in a case of the accidental shooting of a slave. On February 25, 1807, William Dick wrote to Cameron regarding a lawsuit hinging on the actions of a slave delivering flaxseed.

There are many letters from western correspondents, as well as from other lawyers with whom Cameron worked on cases in Tennessee and Kentucky. Extensive correspondence concerns the settlement of the Absolum Tatum estate of Nashville, Tennessee. Cameron worked on this case with Abram Maury, a Nashville lawyer, and Samuel Goodwin, comptroller general of North Carolina. This correspondence and other letters from friends and relatives in Tennessee and Kentucky detail conditions in those states during the first decades of the nineteenth century. In one letter of December 24, 1809, from Joseph Coleman in Nashville to Samuel Goodwin in Fayetteville, Coleman stated "Our Red friend Major George Colbert, principal chief of the Chickasaw Nation, lost a Negro man some time ago, absconded the day after he had purchased him." Letters from Richard Henderson of Kentucky also provide details on frontier conditions, slavery, and relations with Indians. James Buford and Ewen Cameron wrote to Duncan Cameron from Franklin, Davidson County, Tennessee, following their arrival there in September 30, 1799, regarding the migration west and their prospects in the new country. They also related the behavior of their slaves who also made the journey stating that "old Sarah and her family has rebelled terribly since coming here which determined me to sell." On November 11, 1813, Samuel Gilmore wrote to Cameron regarding divorce proceedings and the chances for obtaining a change of venue to the Mississippi Territory, where Gilmore had moved and his wife had apparently declined to accompany him.

John Lenox was another frequent correspondent of Cameron's. Lenox wrote from Lenox Castle, North Carolina, where he engaged in various commercial and land development schemes, often drawing him into debt. Lenox was a colorful and informative correspondent, whose letters detail class and social stratification in western North Carolina. In letters of January through September 1805, Lenox provides a twenty-year overview of debt collections in western North Carolina and Kentucky, a threatened foreclosure on his plantations, and many social matters. By August 9, 1818, Lenox was engaged in the sale of lots in Leaksville, North Carolina, and competing with merchants of Danville, Virginia, for command of the tobacco trade in the area.

Duncan Cameron was a founder of the State Bank of North Carolina in 1811. He corresponded regularly with bank officers and the officers of other banks in the state and elsewhere. Among these correspondents are William Polk, William H. Haywood, John Haywood, William Boylan, Peter Browne, and J. W. Wright. Of particular interest is a letter of February 21, 1814, regarding a rivalry with the Bank of New Bern. Letters of 1815 and 1816 also mention efforts to charter the Second Bank of the United States and the eventual election of the directors of that bank. The effects of the Panic of 1819 are revealed in correspondence concerning attempts to get payments in specie from various banks including the Bank of New Bern and the Bank of Cape Fear, as well as additional information on the Second Bank of the United States.

Other business correspondents of Duncan Cameron included Sam Yarborough who ran the Stagville Store and Sam Dickins, a plantation overseer. Cameron also received frequent letters from planters, traders, or agents of estates looking to buy, sell, or hire slaves.

During this period Duncan Cameron was a representative in the North Carolina House of Commons and Senate. In 1819 when he became a senator, he became chairman of the influential Internal Improvement Committee originally led by Cameron's friend Archibald Murphey. Correspondence from this period, particularly letters from Murphey, documents Cameron's involvement in state politics. Letters from the District of Columbia concern national political matters. A letter of September 1814 also describes the burnt landscape of that city. A letter from Henry Clay in 1823 recommends a Virginia lawyer to work in North Carolina.

Other correspondents of Duncan Cameron include William Richardson Davie, James Webb, Joseph Gales, Willie P. Mangum, Richard Henderson, Paul Carrington, John Devereaux, Thomas B. Littlejohn, Walter Alves, W. G. Grove, William Norwood, and Thomas Ruffin. From 1814 to 1816 when Cameron served as a major general in the North Carolina Militia, he received letters dealing with military matters from Robert Williams, the adjutant general.

Richard Bennehan, Duncan Cameron, and Thomas Bennehan all served as trustees or visitors at the University of North Carolina. Correspondence reveals the growth of the institution. Letters from family members studying there concern many aspects of student life.

Correspondence of the Nash and Mordecai families is also included in the subseries. Frederick Nash was a cousin of Duncan Cameron. Early letters written at Princeton College from 1797 to 1801 are from Frederick Nash to his mother Mary Witherspoon. Letters to Frederick's future wife Mary Kollock of New Jersey from female friends and relatives are also included from 1801 on. By 1805 Frederick and Mary (Kollock) Nash received regular correspondence at their home in New Bern. Their principal correspondents include his sister, Maria Nash, in North Carolina, and her sisters, Sarah Kollock and Eliza Ogden, both of New Jersey. In 1807 Nash negotiated the purchase of Duncan Cameron's house in Hillsborough and they moved to that town, where Frederick developed a law practice. The Nash family correspondence continues throughout the subseries. Mordecai family correspondence centers on George W. Mordecai, a son of Jacob Mordecai. A poetic letter dated July 20, 1815 from Samuel Mordecai, addressed to his brother George from the Azores, contains effusive thoughts on the life of a seaman. Although later a president of the State Bank of North Carolina and husband of Margaret Bain Cameron, George W. Mordecai spent several years working in Louisville, Kentucky, as a merchant. Letters to his parents describe conditions there and his prospects during 1818. Mordecai also corresponded with his sister Mrs. Lazarus of Wilmington, North Carolina.

Correspondence of Thomas Bennehan and of Duncan Cameron and his family, 1826–1852.

Subseries 1.3. These letters are particularly rich in family, business, and plantation matters. During these years Duncan Cameron served as president of the State Bank of North Carolina; Paul Cameron assumed the management of Fairtosh in 1837 and established a plantation in Alabama in 1844. The family was preoccupied with the various medical problems of the Cameron girls throughout the period. Rebecca (Bennehan) Cameron died in 1843. Thomas Bennehan continued in close association with the Camerons, living on the Stagville lands and managing them until his death in 1847. This subseries ends with Duncan Cameron on his deathbed. The collection is increasingly dominated by correspondence of the Cameron children and other relatives of that generation.

Duncan Cameron, Thomas Bennehan, and, later, Paul Cameron corresponded with many commission merchants for whom Duncan Cameron collected debts. Among these merchant firms are Ebenezer Stott, Thomas and Robert Dunn, Robert Hamilton, James Davidson, and Andrew Kevan and Brothers, all of Petersburg; Charles C. Watson of Philadelphia; Hamilton and Donaldson of New York; Duncan Thompson, John Huske, and C. J. Haigh and Son, all of Fayetteville; John Taylor of Wilmington; and Tartt, Stewart and Co. of Mobile, Alabama.

The Cameron and Bennehan plantation holdings and produce continued to expand during this period. Principal products of the plantations continued to be cotton, hams, tobacco, and wheat. Overseers' letters appear with increasing frequency as the size and geographic diversity of their holdings increase. Overseers on North Carolina plantations included William Piper, Samuel Piper, William Hams, and James Colman. Letters from millers also document the grist mills and sawmills on the Cameron lands in North Carolina. Charles Lewellyn and John Webster were overseers on the plantation in Greene County, Alabama.

Business, personal, and family letters detail slavery and agriculture throughout the South. Glimpses into the activities of slaves are provided, as well as basic information on births, deaths, diseases, and illnesses of slaves. A letter of April 26, 1835, records the whipping and near murder of a slave (Jim) by an overseer named Nichols. A letter of June 7, 1845, is from a slave named Virgil to his master Thomas Bennehan. In the letter, written while Bennehan sought treatment at the Virginia springs, Virgil intelligently discusses Bennehan's business and crops in North Carolina. In November 1845, Paul Cameron wrote from Alabama to his father regarding the plantation, describing particularly the overseer and the condition of the slaves. In 1847 there is correspondence about a slave named Milton who ran away from the Greene County plantation and was eventually apprehended. Virgil and other slaves were freed under the terms of Bennehan's will, probated in 1847, and some were given passage to Liberia. Letters of 1848 lament the loss of Virgil from the plantation business. Virgil wrote from Africa on May 29, 1848, providing a description of Africa and expressing some dissatisfaction with the place. Paul Cameron wrote to his father on June 21, 1848, regarding a woman named Harriet, emancipated under the terms of Bennehan's will, whose son had been sold but who thought she could earn sufficient money to buy him back. A letter of October 1848 concerns a slave named Randall who was in trouble with the law in North Carolina. Paul Cameron wanted to send him out of the state because he neither wanted to see him hang nor risk a loss of property.

In the late 1820s Duncan Cameron became more deeply involved in the affairs of the State Bank of North Carolina and in 1829 he was made president of the bank. He corresponded frequently with officers and stockholders in the State Bank, as well as with officials of other banks in North Carolina and Virginia. Letters concerning the banking controversy of 1832–1834 and Jacksonianism are particularly revealing. When the bank was reconstituted as the Bank of the State of North Carolina in 1834, Cameron served as president of that institution, prompting his move to Raleigh in 1836. The impact of the panic of 1837 on banking and commerce in North Carolina is a major topic in this subseries. Cameron resigned from the presidency of the bank in 1849, but continued to receive letters until 1852. Correspondents include William Haywood, William Boylan, John Haywood, Peter Brown, Charles Dewey, George Mordecai, Peter Browne, E. P. Guion of the State Bank, J. W. Wright and Samuel Haywood of the Bank of New Bern, S. W. Wright of the Bank of Cape Fear, and John Brockenbrough and William Dandridge of the Bank of Virginia.

Duncan Cameron and Thomas Bennehan continued to serve on the board of trustees of the University of North Carolina. They were eventually joined on the board by Paul Cameron. Letters concerning the infrastructure of the school continue to be supplemented by correspondence of family members attending classes and participating in the student life at the institution.

Duncan Cameron's involvement in the Episcopal Church, beginning in the 1820s, is well documented. He received regular correspondence from and served on the board of trustees of the General Theological Seminary in New York. Cameron was also a vice-president of the American Bible Society, was a member of the American Sunday School Society, and received regular communications from both organizations. In 1831 his service as a lay delegate to the North Carolina Diocesan Convention is documented. In 1833 he purchased the defunct Episcopal Boys School in Raleigh, transforming it into a school he named St. Mary's. Correspondents include Bishop John Ravenscroft, Bishop Brownell, Rev. William Mercer Green, Rev. Richard Mason, Bishop Levi Silliman Ives, Rev. George Freeman, Bishop Otey, and Rev. Aldert Smedes. There are several letters in the 1840s reflecting Cameron's presidency of the North Carolina Bible Society and his involvement in the Scotch Relief Committee.

Family correspondence is particularly rich in this subseries. There are many letters from Duncan Cameron's brothers and sisters. Mary Read Anderson, Jean Syme, John Adams Cameron, William Cameron, and Thomas Cameron all wrote to Duncan frequently communicating family news and asking his advice. Ewen Cameron wrote periodically from Franklin, Tennessee. Occasional letters were also received from George Anderson, Walker Anderson, and William Anderson in North Carolina and Florida.

There are letters from Duncan Cameron's son Paul at Washington College (now Trinity College) in Hartford, Connecticut, from 1826 until Paul's graduation in 1829. Included are letters from Paul's instructors concerning his progress in school and his deportment. Letters from Captain Partridge continue to discuss Thomas Cameron who, as noted previously, suffered from a learning dysfunction. Thomas Cameron returned to North Carolina with Paul, spending the remainder of his life there. Thomas served as postmaster of the Stagville Post Office during the 1830s, until his removal in 1838. There is virtually no correspondence of Thomas's, but letters of others often refer to his activities.

Included are letters from Paul to Anne (Ruffin) Cameron before their marriage in 1832. There are letters to her from relatives including Thomas Ruffin, Alice Ruffin, Catherine Roulhac, J. G. Roulhac, and others. Correspondence between Anne and Paul is particularly rich. Family letters document Anne's stillborn children in 1835 and 1836 and the births of other children as well as Paul's dissatisfaction with the law, resignation from the bar, move to Fairintosh in 1837, and trips to Alabama during the 1840s and 1850s. Duncan Cameron's daughters' struggles with tuberculosis and family trips made to various springs and to the South in search of a cure for the disease during the 1830s end with the tragic deaths of Mary Anne, Rebecca, Jean and Anne during 1840. Medical trips were resumed, however, to combat Mildred's inexplicable paralysis.

The Cameron men and women corresponded regularly with their extended family. Letters from many female family members refer to child raising, education, family life, health, marriage, religious beliefs, sermons attended, and social life. Among these correspondents are Eliza Nash Anderson, Eliza Cameron, Frances Cameron, Isabelle Cameron, Mary Edmunds, Molly Gales, Mary Jones, and Alice Ruffin.

Anna M. (Cameron) Kirkland's letters concern a severe crisis of faith, following the death of her husband, leading to bouts of mental illness requiring her institutionalization at the Western Asylum in Staunton, Virginia, in 1846 and again in 1851. Letters from her physicians, her mother Anne (Call) Cameron, and other relatives also concern these episodes. This correspondence is remarkable for its frank discussion of mental illness and its treatment.

Paul and Margaret Bain Cameron corresponded frequently during the early 1850s. Letters discuss the declining health of their father Duncan Cameron and the mysterious illness of their sister Mildred. Malaria epidemics at Fairtosh were frequent causes for concern and cost the lives of many slaves during the 1840s and 1850s. Paul Cameron's growing interest in railroads and Mississippi plantations is also documented, eventually leading to a contract for construction of a section of the North Carolina Railroad and to repeated scouting trips to Mississippi. He deeply regretted his purchase of the Alabama plantation because of its poor lands and declining yields of cotton, but he hoped to do better with the selection of riparian plantation lands in Mississippi.

Correspondence of Paul C. Cameron and Margaret Bain (Cameron) Mordecai from 1853 through April 1865. Subseries 1.4. Family correspondence is the major component of this sub-series, covering both the immediate and extended families of the Camerons. Duncan Cameron died in January 1853. His daughter Margaret married George W. Mordecai in June 1853. Mildred's health continued to suffer from mysterious bouts of paralysis. Paul Cameron continued the active management of the family plantation holdings expanding into Tunica County, Mississippi, during the mid-1850s. The correspondence follows the family's growth as the older children of Paul and Anne (Ruffin) Cameron grew to maturity and the younger children were born and advanced into adolescence.

Paul Cameron and Margaret (Cameron) Mordecai wrote to each other and to their respective spouses frequently. They also corresponded with many other relatives. These correspondents include John W. Cameron, Walker Anderson, W. H. Ruffin, J. B. G. Roulhac, Lizzie Jones, Mary Edmunds, Fanny Roulhac, William Anderson, Robert Walker Anderson, Rowena Hines, Thomas Ruffin, Mary Lucas, Anna Kirkland, Eliza Thompson, Margaret Devereux, Ellen Mordecai, Emma Mordecai, Mollie Gales, Seaton Gales, Susan Hines, and Isabelle Cameron. Margaret, called "Maggie," also received letters from Adelaide Montmollin and Louise DeEnde who were friends Margaret made while caring for Mildred in Philadelphia. Other correspondents were Mary McLean Bryant, who had been the Cameron's governess when Margaret and Mildred were young, and Charlotte Rice, who had been Thomas Bennehan's housekeeper. Anne (Ruffin) Cameron also continued to receive correspondence from her Ruffin relatives. Letters of her daughter Anne Ruffin Cameron are also included especially during her absences at school in Philadelphia. In an exchange of correspondence during 1859, Louisa Medway threatened legal action against Anne and her parents for defamation of character.

Paul Cameron's investments in agriculture are reflected in many letters from his commission merchants. The major merchants Cameron patronized were Andrew Kevan of Petersburg, Virginia; C. J. Haigh and Son of Fayetteville, North Carolina; Rowland and Bro. of Norfolk, Virginia; Tartt, Stewart and Co. of Mobile, Alabama; Battle, Noble & Co. of New Orleans, Louisiana; and E. M. Apperson and Co. of Memphis, Tennessee.

There are letters from overseers in North Carolina, Alabama, and Mississippi. William Piper and Samuel Piper continued to oversee the Cameron plantations in North Carolina. John Webster and Wilson Oberly were overseers at the Greene County, Alabama, plantation. William Lamb and Samuel A. Jeter were overseers at the Tunica County, Mississippi, plantation. A letter of December 26, 1856, describes a power struggle at the newly established Mississippi plantation between the overseer and Jacob, a slave, as well as bad feelings between the overseer and other slaves who had travelled from Alabama and North Carolina to Mississippi. Correspondence sheds light on the health, illness, deaths, and medical treatment of slaves in all three states. Mention is frequently made in passing of the activities of slaves. Free persons of color are also mentioned periodically.

Although Paul Cameron's vast landholdings were his first priority, he did contract to build a section of the North Carolina Railroad in the 1850s. There are letters dealing with the contract and with other railroad business, particularly letters from Charles Fisher, an official of the railroad. There are also some letters documenting Cameron's election to one term in the state Senate in 1856. Cameron also served as president of the North Carolina Railroad in 1861. Other principal correspondents included David L. Swain, Cad Jones, William A. Graham, Charles Phillips, Joseph Wright, V. F. Caldwell, Charles Manly, J. W. Norwood, Rev. William Mercer Green, Rev. George Freeman, Ken Rayner, Peter Hairston, Charles Pettigrew, William Halliburton, Worth Daniel, Thomas Bragg, Hugh Waddell, Bishop James Otey, Charles Dewey, Kemp P. Battle, Rev. George Patterson, and Thomas Webb.

According to historian R. D. W. Connor, Anne (Ruffin) Cameron and Bennehan Cameron burned many of Paul Cameron's papers in order to protect him when he requested a pardon from the Union government for his support of the Confederacy. The remaining family letters do provide some documentation of the family's response to the war. There are letters from Paul and Anne Cameron's sons, Duncan Cameron and Bennehan Cameron, written from the schools they attended. There are also letters from their teachers and headmasters about the boys' deportment and academic progress. Duncan Cameron's several attempts to run away are documented.

Margaret Bain (Cameron) Mordecai continued her prolific correspondence with her extended family throughout the Civil War. Her invalid sister Mildred lived with the Mordecai's during the period. Margaret also continued to receive letters from her friends in Philadelphia, Adelaide Montmollin and Louise DeEnde. Margaret corresponded with Emma Mordecai, Laurine Mordecai, Mary Jones, Phebe Hawks, Rebecca Anderson, Mary Lucas, and Robert Walker Anderson. Margaret also received many letters from her Cameron nieces. In addition there are letters to Anne (Ruffin) Cameron from members of the Ruffin family including Catherine Roulhac and Thomas Ruffin, Jr. Some of George W. Mordecai's personal and business correspondence is also included.

Undated letters written by members of the Cameron family and their relatives, arranged alphabetically by writer. Subseries 1.7. Many of the topics highlighted in the descriptions above are continued in this subseries. Letters of Anne (Call) Cameron dwell on the mental illness of her daughter Anna M. (Cameron) Kirkland, and also mention slavery (including a plan to send a slave North under a bogus hire arrangement), the selling of slaves, and discipline problems with slaves. Letters of Anne Owen Cameron contain additional information on the southern trip made by the Cameron family during 1839 and 1840, shortly before her death. Letters of Anne (Ruffin) Cameron include numerous letters to her husband Paul on domestic topics. Letters of Margaret Bain (Cameron) Mordecai refer to the medical care of her sister Mildred and many other topics. An undated letter from Thomas Ruffin refers to the drunkenness of his coachman Jesse, a slave.

Undated letters from individuals who were not members of the Cameron family, arranged alphabetically by writer. Subseries 1.8. Lists of these correspondents are included on pages 37-40 of the inventory microfilmed at the beginning of Reel 1. Noteworthy correspondents include a letter from Francis Scott Key in Georgetown, Washington, D.C., during 1827. Additional letters from John Lenox relate to his many ventures. A total of thirty-four letters are addressed to Mildred Cameron from Betty Marbury in Washington, D.C., North Carolina, Georgia, and Florida during the 1880s. A letter from Ann Moore describes the hire of slaves and an incident involving one in trouble. Wilson Oberly, an overseer in Alabama, forwards data on the weights of 28 slave youths. Samuel Piper, a North Carolina overseer, writes many letters including data on the clothing given to slaves at various estates, the weights of hogs killed, the progress of crops, and information on the marketing of produce. J. Southerland, another overseer, also wrote regarding his duties. Many personal and business letters are from Hugh Waddell. James Webb, a physician, is another frequent correspondent whose letters refer to the health of slaves and of others.

Family Financial and Legal Papers

Family financial and legal papers contain nine subseries: accounts, deeds and indentures, surveys and land plats, tax lists and receipts, promissory notes and bonds, estate papers, wills, insurance policies, and other papers. Each of these subseries is described further below.

Ante-bellum accounts from 1767 through March 1861. Subseries 2.1.1. Included are accounts of Richard and Thomas Bennehan; their business partners William Johnston and Thomas Amis; Duncan and Paul Cameron; and Margaret Bain (Cameron) Mordecai, Mildred C. Cameron, and several wards of the Camerons. Among the types of documents included are shipping invoices, bills, receipts, slave lists, inventories, financial statements, and checks.

The information on a single bill or receipt often combines personal and household expenses with plantation, store, legal, or other business expenses. The private world of the Bennehans and Camerons and the world of business are not always clearly distinct in the accounts. Furthermore, records of different business interests are often mingled. Accounts originate from diverse locations including Raleigh and Hillsborough, North Carolina; New York; Philadelphia; Norfolk and Petersburg, Virginia; Mobile, Alabama; and Memphis, Tennessee. Some accounts span several years and are filed according to the date the account was settled or the date of the last entry.

These accounts document a myriad of services rendered or employed and goods purchased or sold by the Camerons. Services documented include those offered, such as horsebreeding and legal services, as well as services commissioned, such as weaving, sewing, ditching, gardening, hauling, plastering, painting, building, equipment repair, surveying, and slave hiring. Slave lists frequently show births, deaths, prices, and the distribution of clothing and supplies to slaves.

Included are bills from doctors, midwives, merchants, factors, carpenters, coppersmiths, tailors, blacksmiths, seamstresses, cabinetmakers, undertakers, stonemasons, overseers, wheelwrights, jewelers, shoemakers, and many other professions. The mercantile businesses of Johnston & Bennehan, Richard Bennehan, and Messrs. Bennehan and Cameron are documented, including lists of store supplies and references to ventures in the slave trade. Agricultural enterprises of the Bennehans and Camerons dominate the accounts subseries in the later years. Materials concerning the University of North Carolina are also included.

Some topics of special interest that are documented by accounts include the capture of two deserters in May 1781 by Richard Bennehan, who was excused the following month from further military duty for performing this act. Subscription receipts for the Episcopal Schools of North Carolina in 1837 and subsequent bills for construction and repairs at St. Mary's School are found in the collection. An inventory of Duncan Cameron's property in North Carolina dated July 1, 1841, lists 405 slaves, as well as the numbers of livestock and tools by plantation. Beginning in the mid-1840s receipts and slave lists show the expenses for establishing a plantation in Greene County, Alabama. A list of crops dated 1850 shows the declining yields of the Greene County plantation from 1845 to 1850 with the names of overseers. In the early 1850s several bills concern labor and supplies used to build the North Carolina Railroad. Documents in the 1850s also relate to Paul Cameron's Tunica County, Mississippi, plantation. A slave list of March 1861 shows 120 slaves in Alabama and 123 slaves in Mississippi. Undated accounts and slave lists are grouped after those of March 1861.

Civil War era accounts, April 1861–April 1865. Subseries 2.1.2. These accounts document Paul Cameron, Margaret Bain (Cameron) Mordecai, Mildred C. Cameron, and others. Like the earlier accounts, these document a variety of goods and services purchased or provided by the Cameron family. In addition they document Cameron support for the Confederacy including receipts for fabric and merchandise associated with Margaret Mordecai's work with the Ladies' Soldiers Aid Society of Raleigh in 1861.

Undated accounts of Paul Cameron, Margaret (Cameron) Mordecai, Mildred C. Cameron, and others. Subseries 2.1.4. Researchers should note that undated accounts of Richard Bennehan, Thomas Bennehan, and Duncan Cameron, as well as undated slave lists are included in Subseries 2.1.1.

Deeds and indentures, 1772–1908. Subseries 2.2. The bulk of these papers involve either Richard Bennehan or Duncan Cameron, and sometimes both. Transactions involving Thomas Bennehan, Paul Cameron, and other family members are also included.

Surveys and plats, 1761–1937. Subseries 2.3. The bulk of these were commissioned by either Richard Bennehan or Duncan Cameron and date from 1761 to the 1820s. Later survey maps were commissioned by Paul Cameron or his estate. Other surveys are included in the estate papers described below. Survey books are included in Subseries 6.8 among the bound volumes.

Tax lists and receipts, 1770–1941. Subseries 2.4. These document county, town, city, and national property taxes paid by family members over a 150-year period. The bulk of the material relates to Orange County taxes, with some material relating to Hillsborough town taxes and Raleigh city taxes. There are a few tax lists for federal direct taxes, as well as for “in kind” taxes levied by the Confederacy during the Civil War. Cameron property in Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida is also documented by a few receipts and lists. Manuscript copies of the Bennehans’ Orange County tax lists from 1770 through the 1830s list slaves by name, age, and sex. The tax lists also enumerate land holdings, livestock, and farm equipment. Later Cameron tax records also include some detailed lists, but primarily consist of receipts documenting only the amount of taxes paid.

Promissory notes and bonds, 1772–1889. Subseries 2.5. These records document money loaned to family members and to overseers, craftsmen, neighbors, and friends. Notes and bonds also document loans to the Camerons from outside sources.

Estate papers, 1785–1942, arranged alphabetically by name. Subseries 2.6. Each set of papers was collected by the family member who was the executor of the estate. The estate of William Johnston, Richard Bennehan’s business partner, is the earliest set of records in the subseries. Papers from the estates of Thomas Bennehan and Duncan Cameron are especially complete. Other family members documented include Thomas Amis, Daniel Anderson, William Bennehan, Ann Owen (Nash) Cameron, Anne (Call) Cameron, Anne (Ruffin) Cameron, Mildred Coles Cameron, Paul C. Cameron, Thomas A. Cameron, Anne Ruffin (Cameron) Collins, George W. Mordecai, and Margaret Bain (Cameron) Mordecai. Estate papers include extensive slave lists, maps, bills, receipts, statements, correspondence, and other materials. Volumes relating to Cameron estates are included in the bound volumes.

The wills of family members, 1764–1891. Subseries 2.7. Early drafts and rewrites of wills are included. Particularly noteworthy is the will of Thomas D. Bennehan providing for the freedom of some of his slaves and their eventual passage to Liberia. Wills often list the personal servants owned by an individual, as well as other special classes of slaves. The will of Elizabeth Laws is included as she left some of her slaves to Thomas D. Bennehan. Other estates include those of Thomas Amis, Daniel Anderson, Richard Bennehan, Duncan Cameron, John A. Cameron, Paul C. Cameron, Anne M. Ruffin, and Thomas Ruffin.

Insurance papers, 1820–1935. Subseries 2.8. These consist chiefly of fire insurance on buildings owned by the Cameron family, with a few statements and cards from various insurance companies. Included also are fire insurance policies for St. Mary’s School in Raleigh. Insurance papers are most voluminous for the 1870s and 1880s, but are also revealing for the period from the 1840s through the 1860s.

Other family financial and legal papers, 1769–1941. Subseries 2.9. These papers are arranged alphabetically by type of item. Within each folder the arrangement is chronological. Included are advertisements, agreements, appointments, appraisals, certifications, Confederate bonds, court papers, licenses, a marriage settlement, memoranda, a petition for presidential pardon, powers of attorney, releases, stock certificates, stockholder lists, and writs. Most of the items date from the 1780s through the 1860s.

Advertisements chiefly consist of broadsides about the services of Cameron stud horses, including the renowned race horse Sir Archie. The sale of livestock is also advertised, as is the availability of Cameron lands for lease to tenant farmers.

Legal agreements between family members and business associates include contracts, covenants, leases, and articles of agreement. Of particular note are agreements formalizing Duncan Cameron’s business partnerships, especially the ones with Richard and Thomas D. Bennehan. Other agreements include contracts to sell land and slaves. Duncan Cameron entered into a contract with a publisher, Joseph Gales, to write a book summarizing cases decided by the Court of Conference. An agreement between Paul Cameron and Horner and Graves to rent land for a high school in Hillsborough is one of several items concerning educational institutions. Leases and a heating contract for St. Mary's School are also included. Paul Cameron's contracts with former slaves to become tenants on Cameron land illustrate the transition following the Civil War in North Carolina.

There are appraisals of slaves and livestock that the Camerons either owned or were trying to buy, as well as bills of sale for slaves and livestock. Also included are certifications of horse pedigrees and proofs of distilled liquor. An 1838 certification shows that Duncan Cameron paid off a debt on behalf of the Episcopal School of North Carolina in Raleigh.

Miscellaneous legal papers include manuscript copies of official court documents pertaining to cases involving the Camerons. Licences give the Camerons permission to distill spirits and allow George Mordecai to have two gates across a highway on his land. The marriage settlement between Margaret Bain Cameron and George Mordecai is also included, as is Paul Cameron's petition for a presidential pardon in which he sought to be absolved of his support for the Confederacy.

A number of routine legal papers filed with this subseries include powers of attorney, memoranda, releases, and writs. Powers of attorney chiefly grant out-of-state lawyers the right to handle matters concerning Cameron lands. Releases typically free family members from financial obligations. Writs generally demand the payment of overdue debt.

Stock certificates and stockholder lists document the family's extensive financial holdings. Included among stock and bond certificates are Confederate bonds purchased by Paul Cameron with Aldert and Bennet Smedes, directors of St. Mary's School. The bulk of the Cameron stock holdings were in banks, railroads, and insurance companies. Other stocklists are included in the volumes.

Speeches and Writings

This series contains four subseries: speeches, poetry, compositions and notes, and other writings. Documents in each subseries may be augmented by those of others, as well as in the correspondence, accounts, other papers, and volumes in the collection.

Speeches, 1796–1806, and undated. Subseries 4.1. Speeches by John A. Cameron and William Webb were written to be read at meetings of the Dialectic Society, the debating society to which they belonged while students at the University of North Carolina. Paul Cameron's speeches include two lengthy undated addresses. The first is a speech to the Franklin Society of a high school near Cameron's home in Hillsborough, probably written during the late 1860s. The other address to the University of North Carolina Normal School most likely dates from the late 1870s. Other speeches are unidentified and undated.

Poetry, 1826–1884. Subseries 4.2. These poems include verses attributed to members of the Cameron family, with some poems written by family friends. The bulk of the poetry is unattributed and undated. Some of the unattributed poems may have been copied from newspapers, magazines, or books.

Compositions and notes, 1796–1863. Subseries 4.3. These items were written by Cameron youth for school or for tutors. Compositions deal with religious, moral, and historical subjects. There are several compositions by John A. Cameron and William Webb, a family friend, while they were students at the University of North Carolina between 1796 and 1805. Topics include duelling, public education, slavery, government, classical history, and current events. Also included is an undated composition by Duncan Cameron entitled "The Just Proportion of Punishment to Crimes," probably written early in his legal career. School notes pertain to history, religion, arithmetic, and weights and measures. Many notes are undated and unattributed. Other school notes and compositions are contained in the bound volume series.

Other writings, ca. 1854–1892. Subseries 4.4. An article on the life of Paul Cameron by J. D. Cameron appeared in the North Carolina University Magazine shortly following Paul Cameron's death in 1892. An essay by Paul Cameron entitled "A Peep into the Old Dominion" is undated, but relates to the postbellum era. A report by the Committee on the Best Farming in North Carolina constitutes a report to the first annual meeting of an unnamed agricultural society, probably during the early 1850s. This report contains excellent information on agriculture in North Carolina.

Other Papers

Other papers include fourteen subseries of which all but one are included on the microfilm. Included are materials relating to schools, banks, military affairs, churches, the Stagville Post Office, politics, railroads, buildings and grounds, family history, recipes and instructions, remedies and prescriptions, printed items, and notes and fragments. Many of the items in these subseries relate to topics in the correspondence, as well as records kept in accounts and bound volumes. The subseries omitted consists entirely of postbellum invitations and calling cards.

School material, 1799–1895. Subseries 5.1. The arrangement consists of grade reports for individual students followed by printed material arranged alphabetically by school. The grade reports are principally those of immediate family members, including children of Duncan Cameron, Paul Cameron, Rebecca (Cameron) Graham, and Anne (Cameron) Collins. There are also grade reports of other relatives, Allen Ruffin, S. F. Mordecai, and Altona Gales. Printed material consists of pamphlets, invitations to commencements and dances, and circular letters from schools attended by family members and from institutions, like St. Mary's School, in which the family had a continuing interest.

Bank material, 1811–1890. Subseries 5.2. The documents consist of minutes of meetings, proxy letters, powers of attorney, statements of earnings, reports, and circular letters to the stockholders of various banks in North Carolina. Banks include the Bank of New Bern, the Mercantile Bank of Norfolk, and the State Bank of North Carolina, later known as the Bank of the State of North Carolina.

Military material, 1807–1865. Subseries 5.2. Most records stem from the War of 1812 and are chiefly troop returns sent to Duncan Cameron when he was colonel in the North Carolina Militia in 1812, and after his promotion to major general in 1813. Troop returns, also called statements, list the officers, enlisted men, staff, arms, and supplies of the companies and regiments of infantry and cavalry of the 6th and 16th brigades that made up the 3rd division of the North Carolina Militia. This division consisted of regiments representing Person, Orange, Granville, Caswell, and Chatham counties. Also included is a letter of appointment to John A. Cameron, naming him adjutant of the Hillsborough District Regiment of Cavalry of the North Carolina Militia in 1807. There are also some materials stemming from Paul Cameron's appointment in 1863 as agent of Orange County to purchase corn for families of soldiers serving in the Confederate Army. Bound volumes contain additional military material.

Church material, 1807–1889. Subseries 5.3. Items include circular letters, lists, and other printed material relating to the involvement of the Cameron family in church matters. This subseries is divided into three folders: papers relating to Christ Church in Raleigh, papers relating to the Episcopal Church in general, and papers relating to interdenominational charities and organizations.

Papers relating to Christ Church include an 1851 diagram advertising pews for sale. The diagram records the location and price of the pews, with the name of some purchasers written in by hand. Jacob Mordecai's 1861 certificate entitled him to the use and ownership of a pew in the church. There are several documents dealing with the finances of Christ Church. There is an undated list of pledge assessments and church expenses. There are also several circular letters requesting money to help pay church debts and explaining how these debts were incurred.

Material relating to the Episcopal Church in general consists principally of circular letters from parishes in North Carolina and other southern states requesting funds. Also included is the 1817 constitution of the Missionary Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church of North Carolina, naming Duncan Cameron as president.

Other material provides scattered documentation of the family's involvement in interdenominational organizations. Included are the memberships of Mildred Cameron and Pauline (Cameron) Shepherd in the order of the King's Sons and Daughters and a list of books to be procured at the American Sunday School Union Depository. A statement from the Ladies' Relief Society of Raleigh in 1872 refers to the society's soup kitchen. A statement for the orphanage in Oxford is also included as is a pamphlet from the Oakwood Cemetery Association of which George Mordecai was president.

The Stagville Post Office, 1824–1844. Subseries 5.5. Records consist of receipts, accounts, and statements concerning the operation of the post office. The bulk of these are manuscript copies of originals sent to the General Post Office in Washington, D.C. Receipts document the transfer of funds from Stagville to the District of Columbia. The Stagville Post Office was located at the Stagville Store, and the store manager usually doubled as postmaster. Although the Stagville Post Office opened in 1807 and remained in operation into the 1850s, these papers only document the period from 1824 to 1844. John Wilkins was postmaster from 1824 to 1829. Thomas Cameron, Duncan Cameron's oldest son, was postmaster from 1830 to 1838 when he was relieved of office, apparently because of mismanagement. He was replaced by his brother Paul, who served at least through 1844.

Recipes and instructions, 1816–1884. Subseries 5.6. Included are recipes for preparing foods, such as bread, cake, pudding, wine, preserves, pickles, and dressings. Other sets of instructions, also called "recipes," consist of directions for making whitewash, dye, shoeblack, fertilizer, and liquor. Also included are instructions for killing bedbugs, tanning, bleaching, knitting, sewing, and "unpacking the organ." The bulk of the recipes are undated and unattributed, but most seem to have been generated by Cameron women, except for road bills. The road bills, which are in Richard Bennehan's hand, give directions and mileage for travellers, mostly in North Carolina and Virginia. Most are undated, but those by Bennehan predate 1825.

Remedies and prescriptions, 1809–1877. Subseries 5.7. These contain directions for a variety of home remedies and prescriptions used in the Cameron household and for ailments of both people and animals. References to sore throat, dropsy, "yellow water," diphtheria, and rheumatism are included. The bulk of the items are undated.

Material relating to politics, 1802–1876. Subseries 5.8. Items are arranged alphabetically by type of document including acts, bills, the Committee on Internal Improvements of the state senate, memorials, miscellaneous items, petitions, published letters of Duncan Cameron, and voting tallies. Documents primarily concern Duncan Cameron's involvement in North Carolina politics, but also include Paul Cameron's tickets to the 1876 Democratic Convention in St. Louis, at which he served as chairman of the state delegation. Duncan Cameron's service on the powerful Committee on Internal Improvements is documented in reports from the Neuse River Navigation Company and the Roanoke Navigation Company.

Railroads, 1841–1890. Subseries 5.9. Items consist chiefly of railroad passes issued to Paul Cameron. Because of his service as director of both the North Carolina Railroad Company and the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad Company, Cameron was entitled to free passes to ride the trains. Other railroad papers include reports, an invitation to a railroad gala, various legal documents, Paul Cameron's commission from the governor to serve as a director of the North Carolina Railroad Company, and other printed items illustrating Paul Cameron's commitment to the development of railroads in North Carolina.

Printed material, 1800–1890. Subseries 5.10. These include price lists, advertisements, newspaper clippings, circular letters, and other printed material accumulated by members of the Cameron family. The bulk of this material consists of prices current from Duncan and Paul Cameron's factors in Mobile, Norfolk, Baltimore, and Richmond, communicating price lists for tobacco, cotton, wheat, and other products. These lists are particularly numerous for the 1840s through the 1870s. Much of the remaining material consists of advertisements and circular letters offering a variety of products from local and out-of-state merchants. Also included are newspaper clippings (chiefly of poetry) and religious tracts. There is a flyer dated 1824 that lists thirteen toasts for the Fourth of July. Also included are programs from the centennial celebration in Philadelphia in 1876, and an 1876 Christmas poem from the carrier of the Raleigh Daily News to his patrons.

Buildings and grounds, 1792–1853. Subseries 5.12. Included are architectural drawings, a blueprint, building specifications, plant lists, gardening instructions, and drawings. Records show the design, construction, and maintenance of Cameron buildings and grounds, St. Mary's School in Raleigh, St. Matthew's Church in Hillsborough, and the State House in Raleigh. Drawings are chiefly of details such as columns and capitals on buildings. There is a blueprint for a structure labelled "flower pit" at Hillsborough. Building specifications describe the workmanship and materials to be used in the construction of three Cameron- and/or Bennehan- supported building projects: the State House in Raleigh, ca. 1792; a brick building at St. Mary's School in Raleigh; and materials and labor for repairing St. Matthews Church in Hillsborough. Also included is a memorandum of Mr.

Bennehan's houses, listing buildings with their measurements and brief descriptions.

There are three types of documents that provide information about Cameron grounds and gardens, including plant lists, gardening instructions, and drawings. The plant lists are undated and list the types of plants used in the Camerons' flower and kitchen gardens. The instructions include information about how to cultivate celery, directions for making a hotbed, how to make fertilizer for a variety of plants, and directions for killing diseases of fruit and forest trees. The drawings document garden design and placement of plants, as well as overall ground plans that show the locations of gardens and buildings.

Documents on family history, 1777–1961. Subseries 5.13. Items consist of obituaries, memorials, epitaphs, newspaper clippings, certificates of membership, and notes on genealogy. Obituaries consist of newspaper clippings of death notices of some members of the Cameron family. There are handwritten memorials honoring John Cameron, Paul Cameron, Pauline (Cameron) Shepherd, and George W. Mordecai. These memorials were drafted by the organizations and churches to which the deceased belonged. There are also handwritten drafts and copies of the epitaphs to be put on Cameron tombstones, with some drawings of tombstone designs included. Also included are lists of births, deaths, and marriages. There are two undated newspaper clippings mentioning Bennehan Cameron and a 1861 article about Fairintosh. Certificates document the involvement of members of the Cameron family in various organizations and on commissions. There is a certificate naming Duncan Cameron to serve on the commission that settled the border dispute between North Carolina and South Carolina in 1812. There is a certificate appointing Paul Cameron to serve as a representative of North Carolina at the Yorktown celebration in 1879. There are also several certificates documenting the memberships of Paul Cameron, George W. Mordecai, and several members of the Ruffin family in the North Carolina Agricultural Society. Additional genealogical materials may be found in a bank book of Anne (Ruffin) Cameron among the volumes.

Undated notes and fragments. Subseries 5.14.

Volumes

There is a total of 205 volumes in the Cameron Family Papers. Included on the microfilm are all of the ante-bellum volumes, except for legal volumes of Duncan Cameron. Volumes filmed comprise twelve subseries: letter books, bank books, cash books, daybooks, ledgers, ready money sales, other account books, surveys, estate papers, diaries, and school volumes. Many of these subseries are further divided by time period. They thoroughly document Bennehan's and Cameron's financial interests from the earliest association with William Johnston, and are rich sources of information about goods and services available in central North Carolina in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. The information in this series complements various series of loose papers in the collection. Many of the volumes also served secondary purposes in addition to their main function; for instance, a bank book kept by Anne (Ruffin) Cameron contains genealogical notes and an account book kept by Mildred Coles Cameron contains a diary entry. Volumes are arranged chronologically within subseries.

Letter books, 1771–1803 consists of handwritten copies of correspondence. Subseries 6.1. The correspondence concerns the store, plantation, and legal interests of Richard Bennehan and Duncan Cameron. Letters refer to topics also found in the correspondence and accounts subseries of the collection. Letter book entries are also found in an undated poem and copy book within the school volume subseries.

Bank books, 1811–1891 includes twelve volumes. Subseries 6.2. Volumes contain summaries of the personal bank accounts of Duncan, Paul, Mildred, and Anne Cameron. Accounts are chiefly with the State Bank of North Carolina, but some are with the Bank of New Bern, the National Bank of Raleigh, and the Raleigh Bank and Trust Company. The bank books show deposits, withdrawals, interest on notes, and Duncan Cameron's salary as president of the State Bank of North Carolina. Information in bank books is related to data found in the accounts subseries.

Five ante-bellum cash books, 1794–1805. Subseries 6.3.1. These books chiefly document the income of the Stagville Store. Entries include month-by-month summaries of incoming and outgoing cash. Each book lists the names of individuals involved and amounts of cash received or expended. This series also includes a combination of plantation, store, and personal expense records of the Bennehan and Cameron families. A number of the daybooks, ledgers, and estate papers volumes also contain cash accounts.

Four Johnston & Bennehan daybooks, 1773–1785. Subseries 6.4.1. The daybooks are journals of original entry reflecting day-to-day business transactions, primarily at the Snowhill store owned by William Johnston and Richard Bennehan. Also called “blotters,” “journals,” or “memorandum books,” these daybooks all show the daily purchases and payments made at the various stores. Many of the volumes indicate that original daybook entries have been transferred to ledgers, which show all the charges and payments made on a single account over an extended period of time. Some of these ledgers also survive in the ledgers subseries. Daybooks reflect a variety of goods available at country stores during the period: food and liquor, household supplies, agricultural equipment, books, clothing, and textiles. Volumes reveal the diverse population of craftsmen, slaves, planters, and others who purchased at the stores with cash, tobacco, services, or credit. Daybooks also document family financial transactions including person, household, and plantation expenses. Data in the volumes relate directly to many of the accounts in the accounts subseries.

Thirty-seven daybooks of Richard Bennehan, 1785–1810. Subseries 6.4.2. These volumes are journals of original entry for the Snowhill and Stagville Stores owned by Richard Bennehan. Descriptions of the daybooks above also apply to those in this subseries. There are entries for every year from 1785 to 1810 providing a remarkable source for the study of commerce and economic conditions in North Carolina during the Confederation and in the early national period.

Eleven ante-bellum ledgers, 1767–1834. Subseries 6.5.1. Ledgers include those from the Snowhill Store, the Stagville Store, slave ledgers, mill ledgers, and plantation ledgers. Financial activities of the Bennehan and Cameron family are fully documented through the 1830s. Individuals represented include William Johnston, Richard Bennehan, Duncan Cameron, and others who worked for them at their various enterprises. Ledgers show all charges and payments made on individual accounts over an extended period of time. Accounts are often settled through the exchange of cash, tobacco, services, or credit for goods. The entries have been transferred from daybooks or other sources of original entry. Sometimes labelled “memorandum books” or “journals,” these volumes chiefly record store transactions. They do, however, also document a variety of personal, legal, and plantation business, reflecting the fluidity of financial activities during the period. One of the other volumes, included in subseries 6.7.1 below, and a legal volume, omitted, also contain ledger-type entries.

Five volumes of ready money sales, 1784–1811. Subseries 6.6. These books contain monthly accounts of merchandise sold in the Snowhill and Stagville Stores for cash. Each lists the items and their values by date of purchase and gives monthly totals.

A variety of thirty-nine other ante-bellum and Civil War era account books, 1768–1865. Subseries 6.7.1. These volumes include the following types of accounts: slave lists, store inventories, personal account books, pork lists, household expenses, stud fees, lists of balances, invoices and receipts, mill accounts, stock lists, crop lists, tool lists, check books, school accounts, and property lists. More than one kind of account often appears in the same book, demonstrating the fluid relationship that existed between personal, household, plantation, store, and other family financial interests. Particularly noteworthy are the slave lists including a list of Negroes and expenses to Alabama dating from 1844 to 1845. This item documents the migration of Paul Cameron with a coffle of slaves from North Carolina to Green County, Alabama.

Three surveys, 1819–1890. Subseries 6.8. These items document two different surveys of Cameron lands conducted at the beginning and the end of the nineteenth century during the tenures of Duncan Cameron and Paul C. Cameron. Volumes contain field notes compiled by the surveyors.

Six volumes of estate papers, 1785–1925. Subseries 6.9. These volumes chronicle the estates of William Johnston, William Bennehan, Mildred Coles Cameron, and Paul C. Cameron. Other loose estate papers are included in subseries 2.7 described above.

One ante-bellum diary, 1839–1840. Subseries 6.11.1. Another diary, from 1821, is omitted from the microfilm due to its poor physical condition and illegibility. That volume chiefly contains records of the North Carolina State Board on Internal Improvements. The volume included is a remarkable travel diary of Mildred Coles Cameron, which records travel to Charleston, Savannah, and St. Augustine, with descriptions of the weather, food, accommodations, landscape, and social and religious life in each location visited. The Camerons made this journey as a family in hopes of improving the health of Anne Owen Cameron, who, along with two of her sisters, died almost immediately after the close of the volume. Correspondence of the period and other records of Mildred Coles Cameron also relate to these topics.

One undated diary. Subseries 6.11.3. This slight volume, probably kept by Duncan Cameron for the months of June, July, and August of an unidentified year, shows the days set aside for public events such as a cockfight at Hillsboro, a tax gathering at the Fish Dam ford, meetings of the state supreme court at Raleigh, and a mustering of the Huckabees in Wake.

Ten school volumes, ca. 1795–1831. Subseries 6.12. These books document the education of both male and female members of the Bennehan and Cameron households. Individuals represented include Thomas G. Amis, Dominic Bennehan, Margaret Bain Cameron, Rebecca B. Cameron, Paul C. Cameron, and unidentified persons. Volumes consist chiefly of notes on history, philosophy, geometry, math, law, and medicine. Other school-related materials may be found in the Richard Bennehan daybook, January 1–February 14, 1807, and January 1, 1810, as well as in another ante-bellum and Civil War era account book of Thomas A. Cameron, 1824–1825 and 1830–1833. Substantive school-related materials are also included in many subseries of loose papers described above.

Sixteen other volumes, ca. 1796–ca. 1870. Subseries 6.13. These volumes supplement the papers found in series 5 of the collection (described above). They include information relating to military affairs, church matters, post office matters, state bank affairs, and food preparation. Also included is George W. Mordecai's journal of proceedings for the Forest Manufacturing Company and a scrapbook created by Margaret Bain (Cameron) Mordecai.

N.B. Omissions from the microfilm are listed below and in the Editorial Note.

Subseries 1.5, Correspondence of Paul C. Cameron, Margaret Bain (Cameron) Mordecai, and their Families, May 1865–1890.

Subseries 1.6, Correspondence of Anne (Ruffin) Cameron and Her Family, 1891–1935.

Subseries 2.1.3, Post War Accounts, May 1865–1942.
