INTRODUCTION

The impact of the ante-bellum southern plantations on the lives of their black and white inhabitants, as well as on the political, economic, and cultural life of the South as a whole, is one of the most fascinating and controversial problems of present-day American historical research. Depending upon the labor of slaves who constituted the great majority of the American black population, the plantations were both homes and business enterprises for a white, southern elite. They were the largest, the most commercialized, and on the whole, the most efficient and specialized agricultural enterprises of their day, producing the bulk of the South's staple crops of tobacco, cotton, sugar, rice, and hemp. Their proprietors were entrepreneurs who aspired to and sometimes, after a generation or two, achieved the status of a cultivated landed aristocracy. Many distinguished themselves not only in agriculture but in the professions, in the military, in government service, and in scientific and cultural endeavors.

Planters ambitious to augment their wealth, together with their black slaves, were an important driving force in the economic and political development of new territories and states in the Southwest. Their commodities accounted for more than half the nation's exports, and the plantations themselves were important markets for the products of northern industry. In short, they played a crucial role in the development of a national market economy.

The plantations of the Old South, the white families who owned, operated, and lived on them, and the blacks who toiled on them as slaves for more than two centuries have been the subjects of numerous historical studies since the pioneering work of Ulrich B. Phillips in the early twentieth century. The literature, highly controversial, has focused on questions such as the evolution and nature of the planter class and its role in shaping the white South's economy, culture, and values; the conditions experienced by American blacks in slavery; the impact of the "peculiar institution" on their personalities and the degree to which a distinct Afro-American culture developed among them; and, finally, the sources of the tension between the proslavery interests of the South and the "free labor" interests of the North that culminated in secession and civil war.

Research materials are plentiful. Census returns and other government documents, newspapers and periodicals, travelers' accounts, memoirs and autobiographies, and an abundance of polemical literature have much to tell historians about life on ante-bellum plantations. The autobiographies of former slaves, several twentieth-century oral history collections, and a rich record of songs and folklore are significant sources for the black experience in slavery. All the historical literature, however, from Phillips to the most recent studies, has relied heavily on the enormous collections of manuscript plantation records that survive in research libraries scattered throughout the South. These manuscripts consist of business records, account books, slave lists, overseers' reports, diaries, private letters exchanged among family members and friends, and even an occasional letter written by a literate slave. They come mostly from the larger tobacco, cotton, sugar, and rice plantations, but a significant number survive from the more modest estates and smaller slaveholdings whose economic operations tended to be less specialized.

Plantation records reveal nearly every aspect of plantation life. Not only business operations and day-to-day labor routines, but family affairs, the roles of women, racial attitudes, relations between masters and slaves, social and cultural life, the values shared by members of the planter class, and the tensions and anxieties that were inseparable from a slave society are all revealed with a fullness and candor unmatched by any of the other available sources. Moreover, these records are immensely valuable for studies of black slavery. Needless to say, since they were compiled by members of the white master class, they provide little direct evidence of the inner feelings and private lives of the slave population. But they are the best sources of information about the care and treatment of slaves, about problems in the management of slave labor, and about forms of slave resistance short of open rebellion. They also tell us much about the behavior of slaves, from which historians can at least draw inferences about the impact of slavery on the minds and personalities of its black victims.

Deposited in southern state archives and in the libraries of many southern universities and historical societies, significantly more plantation records have become available in recent decades. Our publication is designed to assist scholars in their use by offering for the first time an ample selection of the most important materials in a single microfilm collection. Ultimately it will cover each geographical area in which the plantation flourished, with additions of approximately four new collections annually. A special effort is being made to offer the rarer records of the smaller slaveholders and to include the equally rare records of the plantations in the last quarter of the eighteenth century; however, the documentation is most abundant for the operations of the larger plantations in the period between the War of 1812 and the Civil War, and their records will constitute the bulk of our publication.

Description of the Collection

This collection consists of approximately 1,025 items, arranged in series by name of individual. The Keith family papers consists of materials from five generations of Keith, Scott, and Carter family members from Warrenton and surrounding Fauquier County, Virginia. Materials include correspondence, accounts, financial materials, scrapbooks, clippings, estate materials, miscellany and genealogical notes.

Robert I. Taylor (ca. 1777–1840) was a prominent Alexandria, Virginia, lawyer and president of the town’s common council. His papers contain several items of correspondence, estate materials, and materials concerning the guardianship of Richard Marshall Scott (b. 1829) by William Haywood Foote (ca. 1781–1846), executor of Richard Marshall Scott (d. 1833). The latter includes a commonplace book kept by Foote. Taylor’s wife, Mary Elizabeth (Berry) Taylor (d. ca. 1863) also has several letters in the collection, as does Elizabeth Blackwell (Pickett) Scott (1788–1862), wife of Judge John Scott (1781–1850).

Correspondence of Isham Keith (1801–1863), his wife, Juliet (Chilton) Keith (1800–1887), and her sister, Ann Smith (Chilton) Johnston (1810–1893), is included herein. Isham Keith was an influential Warrenton, Virginia, businessman. Among his correspondence is a letter to Judge John Scott and several letters from a brother in Georgia, John Marshall Keith (1788–1841), discussing the sale of a slave and state and national politics.

Robert Eden Scott (1808–1862), son of Judge John Scott and Elizabeth Blackwell (Pickett) Scott, was recognized as one of the state’s leading Whigs in the years immediately prior to the Civil War. His papers consist of correspondence, mostly with his son Robert Taylor Scott, and materials concerning Sarah Scott (Ashton) Glassell. Robert Eden Scott’s third wife, Heningham Watkins (Lyons) Scott, (1827–1886) has several items of correspondence in the collection as does his sister, Margaret Gordon (Scott) Lee (1817–1866). There is also a box of estate materials for Margaret Gordon (Scott) Lee (box 2), which contains accounts, vouchers, correspondence, and reports to the Fauquier County, Virginia, Court.

Richard Henry Carter (1817–1880) was a major in the 8th Virginia Infantry during the Civil War. In 1879 he received an appointment to the U.S. Customs House in Panama and his correspondence during this period is largely with his son-in-law, Robert Taylor Scott. One letter, dated 10 March 1880, discusses national politics and American policies toward Panama; however, much of his correspondence concerns a large debt which was administered by Robert Taylor Scott (1834–1897). Carter's wife, Mary Welby (DeButts) Carter (1819–1885), also has several letters in the collection.

The Keith papers contain some correspondence of Isham Keith (1833–1902), son of Isham Keith and Juliet (Chilton) Keith, and his wife Sarah Agnes (Blackwell) Keith (1837–1912), as well as a scrapbook belonging to her. A letter to Mrs. Keith from Armistead Churchill Gordon (1855–1931) discusses family history. James Keith, Circuit Judge and President of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals from 1895 to 1916, was another son of Isham Keith and Juliet (Chilton) Keith. His letters are largely with family members and deal with family history. There is also an autograph album belonging to Judge Keith from the 1859–1860 session at the University of Virginia.
