INTRODUCTION

Perhaps because of its proximity to the United States, no country in the Western Hemisphere concerned the State Department during the cold war years more than Cuba.

Instability and the threat of Communism gave rise to vigilant diplomatic reporting and exhaustive U.S. intelligence, all collected here in the U.S. State Department Central Files for Cuba. These records offer a close look at the evolution of “Communist” Cuba.

A multiracial society, Cuba was transformed politically, economically, and socially into a totalitarian state. Its charismatic leader, Fidel Castro, exercised control over all aspects of Cuban life through the Communist Party and its affiliated mass organizations, the government bureaucracy, and the state security apparatus.

Government

Beginning in January 1959, Castro ruled by decree. Executive and administrative power was vested in the Council of State and the subordinate Council of Ministers, over which Castro presided, supported by six vice presidents. Legislative authority rested with the National Assembly of People’s Power, which met annually for approximately five days and was state controlled. When not in session, the assembly was represented by the Council of State. Castro, president of the council, had his brother, Raul, as first vice president, placing him first in the line of succession. Raul Castro was also minister of the Revolutionary Armed Forces.

Fidel Castro, while chief of state, was also party secretary of the only constitutionally recognized legal political party—the Communist Party. The party’s Politburo and Central Committee together included most of the country’s military and civilian leaders. The party monopolized all government positions, including judicial offices. Though not a formal requirement, party membership was a de facto prerequisite for high-level official positions and professional advancement in most areas, although nonparty members were sometimes allowed to serve in the National Assembly.

Although the constitution granted limited rights of assembly and association, these rights were subject to the requirement that they not be “exercised against ... the existence and objectives of the socialist State.” The Penal Code specifically outlawed “illegal or unrecognized groups.” Cubans did not have the right to change their government, to freedom of expression, or to unrestricted travel. The government and party controlled all electronic and print media.

Although the constitution theoretically provided for independent courts, it explicitly subordinated them to the National Assembly and to the Council of State. The People’s Supreme Court was the highest judicial body. Due process was routinely denied to Cuban citizens, especially in cases involving political offenses. The constitution stated that all legally recognized civil liberties could be denied to anyone who opposed the “decision of the Cuban people to build socialism.”

The Economy

Under the slogan “Socialism or Death,” the Cuban government proclaimed Cuba a socialist, or Communist, nation with an economy organized under Marxist-Leninist precepts. The government owned and operated most means of production. The state eventually employed about 75 percent of the labor force. The Council of State was responsible for running the economy and for economic policy, although the government devolved some authority to the economic ministries and enterprises.

Political Affairs

Until 1959, Cuba was often ruled by military figures who either obtained or remained in power by force. Fulgencio Batista, for example, was an army sergeant who established himself as Cuba’s dominant leader for more than twenty-five years. Batista fled the country on January 1, 1959, as Castro’s “26th of July Movement” gained control. Castro had established the movement in Mexico, where he was exiled after the failed July 26, 1953, attack on the Moncada army barracks at Santiago de Cuba. Within months of taking power, Castro moved to consolidate his power by imprisoning or executing opponents. Hundreds of thousands of Cubans fled the island.

Foreign Relations

After Castro declared Cuba a socialist state on April 16, 1961, he pursued close relations with the Soviet Union until the advent of perestroika and the subsequent demise of the USSR. During that time, Cuba received substantial economic and military assistance from the USSR estimated at $5.6 billion annually, which kept its economy afloat and enabled it to maintain an enormous military establishment. In 1962, Cuban-Soviet ties led to a direct confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union over the installation of nuclear-equipped missiles in Cuba, resolved only when the USSR agreed to withdraw the missiles and other offensive weapons.

This collection of documents will allow researchers to examine the origins of America’s stormy relations with Castro’s Cuba. Specifically, the extensive American diplomatic reporting and newly declassified U.S. State Department material reveal how Castro’s one-party Communist dictatorship led the United States, Cuba, and the world to the precipice of nuclear war.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Confidential U.S. State Department Central Files, 1960–January 1963

The U.S. State Department Central Files are the definitive source of American diplomatic reporting on political, military, social, and economic developments throughout the world in the twentieth century. Surpassing the scope of the State Department's Foreign Relations of the United States (FRUS) series, the Central Files provide extensive coverage of all political, military, social, and economic matters relating to a particular country and/or world event.

The State Department Central Files for 1960–January 1963 cover a crucial period in U.S. and world history. Each part of the 1960–January 1963 series contains a wide range of primary materials: special reports and observations on political and military affairs; studies and statistics on socioeconomic matters; interviews and minutes of meetings with U.S. and foreign government officials and leaders; legal and claims documentation; full texts of important letters and cables sent and received by U.S. diplomats and embassy personnel; reports, news clippings, and translations from journals and newspapers; and countless high-level/head of state government documents, including speeches, memoranda, official reports, aide-mémoire, and transcripts of political meetings and assemblies.

In addition, these records offer new insights into the evolution of American foreign policy toward both allies and adversaries and into the shaping of the policies of these countries toward the United States. Of even greater importance for the study of individual countries is the comprehensive manner in which the Central Files illuminate the internal affairs of foreign countries. There are thousands of pages arranged topically and chronologically on crucial subjects: political parties, unrest and revolution, human rights, government administration, fiscal and monetary issues, labor, housing, police and crime, public health and works, national defense, military equipment and supplies, foreign policy making, wars and alliances, education, religion, culture, trade, industry, and natural resources. On these subjects and more, the Central Files offer authoritative, in-depth, and timely documentation and analysis.

SOURCE NOTE

Microfilmed from the holdings of the National Archives, College Park, MD, Record Group 59: Records of the Department of State, Central Decimal Files, decimal numbers 737, 837, and 937 (Cuba internal affairs) for the period 1960–January 1963. All available original documents have been microfilmed.

ORGANIZATION OF THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE DECIMAL FILING SYSTEM

From 1910 to 1963 the Department of State used a decimal classification system to organize its Central Files. This system assembled and arranged individual documents according to their subject, with each subject having a specific decimal code. The decimal system from 1950 to January 1963 consists of ten primary classifications numbered 0 through 9, each covering a broad subject area.

CLASS 0: Miscellaneous.

CLASS 1: Administration of the United States Government.

CLASS 2: Protection of Interests (Persons and Property).

CLASS 3: International Conferences, Congresses, Meetings, and Organizations.

CLASS 4: International Trade and Commerce. Trade Relations. Customs Administration.

CLASS 5: International Informational and Educational Relations. Cultural Affairs. Psychological Warfare.

CLASS 6: International Political Relations. Bilateral Treaties.

CLASS 7: Internal Political and National Defense Affairs.

CLASS 8: Internal Economic, Industrial, and Social Affairs.

CLASS 9: Other Internal Affairs. Communications. Transportation. Science.

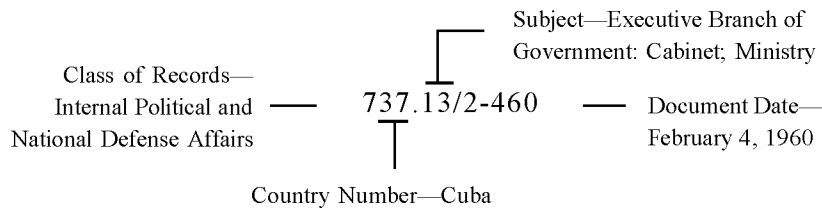

Internal Affairs

For this section of the U.S. State Department Central Files, University Publications of America (UPA) has microfilmed the documents contained in Classes 7, 8, and 9. Within these classes each subject is defined by a decimal file number. The decimal file number is followed by a slant mark (/). The number after the slant mark (/) refers to the date on which the document was generated. Documents within each decimal file number are arranged in chronological order. The entire decimal file number is stamped on the right side of the first page of every document.

These classes are concerned almost exclusively with the internal matters of individual countries. The class number (7, 8, or 9) is followed by the country number. The number following the decimal point indicates subtopics within the major classifications. The date after the slant mark (/) identifies the individual document.

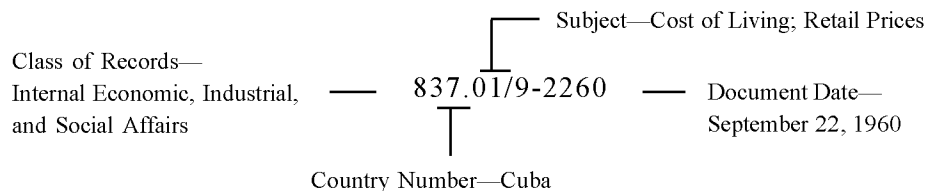

In a small number of instances, documents were assigned erroneous or incomplete decimal numbers. UPA has included, in brackets, corrected decimal entries. In addition, misfiled decimal number documents have also been included in brackets.

CLASS 7. Example, 737.13/2-460

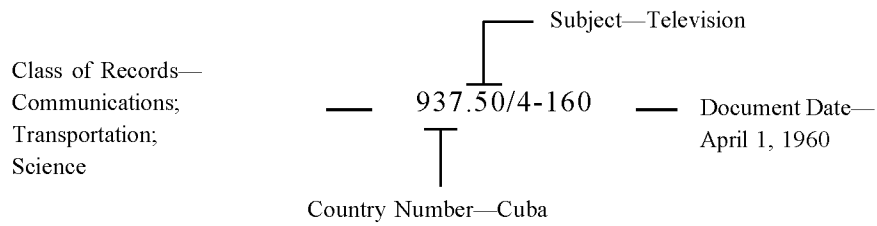

737.13/2-460 indicates a document dated February 4, 1960, relating to the cabinet of the executive branch of government (13) in Cuba (37).

CLASS 8. Example, 837.01/9-2260

837.01/9-2260 indicates a document dated September 22, 1960, relating to the cost of living (01) in Cuba (37).

CLASS 9. Example, 937.50/4-160

937.50/4-160 indicates a document dated April 1, 1960, relating to television (50) in Cuba (37).

Note: For the convenience of the researcher, wherever a specific classification number totals more than one hundred pages, a breakdown of the material by month and year is provided. When applicable, major subjects have been included with the month and year breakdown.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics in this microform publication. The first number after each entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular file folder containing information on the subject begins. Hence, 32: 0756 directs the researcher to the folder that begins at Frame 0756 of Reel 32. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial section of this guide, the researcher will find the folder title, inclusive dates, and a list of Major Topics and Principal Correspondents, listed in the order in which they appear in the film.
