FOREIGN GAZETTEERS OF THE U.S. BOARD ON GEOGRAPHIC NAMES

Introduction

This guide is intended for use with the microfiche collection Foreign Gazetteers of the U.S. Board on Geographic Names, published by Congressional Information Service (CIS). The foreign gazetteers contained in the microfiche collection are designed to help users of maps find a specific geographic feature's location quickly. They also provide the authoritative spellings of geographic names.

The United States Board on Geographic Names (USBGN) is the official U.S. authority for geographic names. According to a Public Law enacted in 1947, USBGN operates through several committees to standardize names of geographic features worldwide. The Board shares its responsibility with the Secretary of Interior, who approves the names recommended by the USBGN, appoints members to committees, and ratifies principles and procedures. USBGN members are linguists, geographers, and cartographers who serve two-year terms on the Board. They review maps and other sources of the country to determine the approved names.

Once the Board has approved the geographic names for a country, those names are assembled into a gazetteer for that country. The gazetteer is a geographic dictionary with cross references from former names or unapproved spellings of names to the current approved name. In addition, the gazetteer in its most current form presents for each entry:

- Type of place or feature (e.g., populated place, bridge, mine, river, forest, etc.)
- Latitude and longitude
- Country and first-order division in which the feature is located
- Universal Transverse Mercator grid coordinates, and Joint Operations Graphic map sheet numbers.

All entries are written in the Roman alphabet, with appropriate diacritical marks. In gazetteers of countries with Arabic, Chinese, and other non-romanized alphabets, the transliteration system used is described in detail in the gazetteer's introduction.

The gazetteers of USBGN have been prepared, updated, and distributed by a variety of federal agencies, including the Office of Geography in the Department of Interior and the Army Topographic Command. Since 1971 the Defense Mapping Agency has had responsibility for preparing and distributing the gazetteers.

The original CIS microfiche collection contains 181 volumes, and comprises the most recent editions of the USBGN Gazetteers published for each country as of May 1987.

Group 2 of the microfiche collection contains 27 volumes on 168 microfiche, and comprises the most recent editions of USBGN Gazetteers published for 22 countries and current conventional names, as listed in the DMA Public Sale Catalog issued May 1990.

From 1955 through May 1971, one hundred and sixteen gazetteers were issued in a numbered series. The CIS collection encompasses those gazetteers issued in the numbered series and several issued earlier, only when they have not been superseded by later editions. The earliest gazetteer publication date in the collection is 1950.

All countries of the world except the United States are covered in the collection. Generally each gazetteer covers one country; however, the collection also includes special supplemental volumes for selected world regions, updating entries for numerous countries in a specific world region; and special gazetteers for undersea features, conventional names, and Wade-Giles to Pinyin transcription systems to romanize Chinese names.

Bibliographic Guide

This bibliographic guide lists the gazetteers included in the original and Group 2 microfiche collections, and provides bibliographic information for each, including the CIS accession number which identifies the gazetteer in the microfiche file, the issuing agency, series number (if applicable), collation, publication date, Defense Mapping Agency stock number and price, and Superintendent of Documents number if assigned.

Because some countries have changed their names since independence or other major changes in government, the guide also provides cross references from the current country name to the previous country name used at the time the gazetteer was published (e.g., Burkina Faso, see Upper Volta). Additional cross references are provided for other major territories or islands which are grouped in a single gazetteer, but for which geographic names are alphabetized as a separate entity (e.g., Falkland Islands, see South Atlantic). Islands with fewer than 1,000 residents have not been referenced separately.

Microfiche File

The microfiche file is arranged alphabetically, following the pattern of the Defense Mapping Agency Public Sale Catalog effective through Sept. 1990.

Each microfiche has an eye-legible, color-backed header with the following identifying information: country name, volume number if part of a multiple volume gazetteer, publication date, CIS accession number, fiche card number, page range, and five-letter guides showing the first and last alphabetical place-name entries on that fiche, similar to guide words on a dictionary page.

The five-letter place-name guides are the first five letters of the place-name entry, regardless of spacing, hyphenation, and other punctuation. For gazetteer supplement volumes, containing updated place-names for many countries in a region, the place-name guides are the first five letters of the first and last countries on that fiche. When place-names begin with numbers, the numerical names generally appear at the end of the alphabetized names.

When a gazetteer covers more than one major geopolitical entity, is divided into parts with a title page for each geopolitical entity, and has a complete alphabet of place-names for each part, the entity's name is shown in the microfiche header, preceding the five-letter place-name guides. Placement and format of data appearing in microfiche headers are illustrated in the sample, at left.

The archival quality microfiche contained in Foreign Gazetteers of the U.S. Board on Geographic Names are produced in accordance with the American National Standard for Micrographics-Microfiche (ANSI/AIIM MS5-1985), with modifications to improve their usefulness. Every care is taken in filming and processing to ensure the highest possible levels of contrast and resolution. Despite these efforts, the poor original quality of print on some parts of pages in certain gazetteers has inevitably resulted in a lower level of image quality in individual frames created from those gazetteers.

Acknowledgements

The need for this microfiche collection was suggested to CIS by Stuart M. Basefsky, Documents Reference and Map Librarian of the William R. Perkins Library at Duke University. We wish to thank Mr. Basefsky for the idea and the Perkins Library for lending us many gazetteers for filming. We also want to express our thanks to Gene Kubal and Hugh Howard and other staff at the Department of the Army Library and to staff at the U.S. Geological Survey for lending us numerous gazetteers.
