SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This edition of Papers of the NAACP consists of the General Office Files from Group IV of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) Records collection at the Library of Congress. Arranged alphabetically by subject, these General Office Files provide an in-depth look at some of the most important developments in the civil rights struggle between 1966 and 1970. These include the emergence of the Black Power movement, the enactment of open housing legislation, the fight against discrimination by employers and labor unions, the War on Poverty, urban riots, and the Vietnam War. Part 28, Series A, consists of the General Office Files spanning from letters A to P: from "Africa" to "Poor People's Campaign." Part 28, Series B, comes from the same General Office Files and spans from letters P to Z: from "Powell, Adam Clayton, Jr." to "White Supremacy."

The "Africa" files document the NAACP's interest in colonial liberation movements, African nationalism, and opposition to the South African policy of apartheid. The "Africa" files span from Frame 0388 to Frame 0564 of Reel 1. The "Africa—General" folder includes a copy of a statement by Massachusetts Senator Edward W. Brooke in which he recounts the humanitarian interests of the United States in connection with the Nigerian civil war. There is also a July 8, 1969, telegram from NAACP Executive Director Roy Wilkins to Mrs. Tom Mboya on the assassination of her husband. Tom Mboya had been a Kenyan trade union leader, a leader of the Kenyan independence movement, and a government official in the new, independent Kenyan government. In the "Africa—Rhodesia" folder, there is a May 4, 1966, letter from Wilkins to U.S. President Lyndon B. Johnson stating the NAACP's position on Rhodesia. Wilkins wrote: "Our nation has a direct interest in a democratic outcome of Rhodesia's political problems.... We urgently recommend to our government a harder, bolder, more imaginative, more resourceful Rhodesian policy than that now in effect." This folder also includes a reply to Wilkins by Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Palmer, informing Wilkins that President Johnson had "re-affirmed our commitment to the principle of self-determination for the Rhodesian people" in a speech he gave at a White House celebration in honor of the third anniversary of the Organization of African Unity. A copy of Johnson's speech follows Palmer's letter.

In the "Africa—South Africa" folder, there is a letter from A. Philip Randolph informing Wilkins that Randolph had accepted the chairmanship of the Committee of Conscience Against Apartheid. The committee was formed by the American Committee on Africa and the National Student Federation. Following Randolph's letter is an "Appeal to the People of New York" to cease transacting business with First National City Bank or Chase Manhattan Bank in order to protest the involvement of these banks in South Africa. The "South Africa" folder also includes a July 22, 1966, NAACP press release that reprints a statement by Roy Wilkins calling for sanctions against South Africa and Rhodesia. There is also a July 4, 1967, press release protesting the State Department's decision to allow a U.S. Navy aircraft carrier to stop for four days in Capetown, South Africa. The press release restates part of a letter from Wilkins to Secretary of State Dean Rusk, in which Wilkins wrote: "Our country should have no dealings with South Africa whatsoever." Other items pertaining to NAACP interest in Africa can also be found in the "Leagues and Organizations" file beginning at Frame 0872 of Reel 18. Organizations covered include the African American Institute, American Committee on Africa, American Negro Leadership Conference on Africa, Committee of Conscience Against Apartheid, and Operation Crossroads Africa, Inc.

In 1966, during the Meredith March Against Fear, Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) Chairman Stokely Carmichael articulated the concept of Black Power at a rally in Greenwood, Mississippi. In the "Articles" file at Reel 2, Frame 0040, there is an article by NAACP Director of Public Relations Henry Lee Moon entitled, "Negroes in the United States: 1966." Moon wrote that Carmichael's speech on Black Power "became the center of a raging controversy for the remainder of the year." According to Moon, "The phrase was not new, but its use as a separatist racist rallying cry was." Three weeks after Carmichael's use of the term Roy Wilkins used his keynote address at the NAACP's national convention in Los Angeles to respond to Carmichael and to establish the NAACP's position on the phrase. Wilkins declared:

No matter how endlessly they try to explain it, the term black power means anti-white power. In a racially pluralistic society, the concept, the formation, and the exercise of an ethnically-tagged power means opposition to the other ethnic powers.... It has to mean separatism. Now separatism...offers a disadvantaged minority little except the chance to shrivel and die.... Black power...can mean in the end only black death.... We of the NAACP will have none of this. We have fought it too long.¹

The "Black Power" file in this edition (Reel 3, Frame 0878) contains public reaction to Wilkins's speech. This edition also includes other NAACP reactions to the term. In a December 13, 1966, letter, Wilkins called the slogan "a semantic error of such a magnitude as to suggest that the sponsors do not have the requisite judgment to speak in behalf of any except their own small personal group." In a March 14, 1969, letter, NAACP Assistant Executive Director John A. Morsell further explained the NAACP's views on Black Power. He wrote that in terms of building

1. The full text of this speech can be found in UPA's Papers of the NAACP, Supplement to Part 1, 1966-1970: Meetings of the Board of Directors, Records of Annual Conferences, Major Speeches, and Special Reports, Reel 4, Frame 0081.

black community institutions and achieving black political power, the NAACP had no objections to the term. He continued: "But, when in the mouths of some of its advocates it does in fact become anti-white, and an appeal to hatred rather than to justice, then we do not feel we are justified in remaining silent about it" (Reel 4, Frame 0301). The location of other documents pertaining to Black Power can be found by consulting the reel and subject indexes of this user guide.

Closely related to the NAACP's position on Black Power was the "Crisis and Commitment" statement (Reel 6, Frame 0106). This October 1966 statement was issued by Wilkins and the NAACP, joined by some of the longtime leaders in the civil rights struggle. The cosigners were Dorothy Height, president of the National Council of Negro Women; A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Whitney M. Young Jr., executive director of the National Urban League; Bayard Rustin, director of the A. Philip Randolph Institute; Amos T. Hall, executive secretary of the Prince Hall Masons; and Hobson R. Reynolds, grand exalted ruler of the Improved Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the World. The "Crisis and Commitment" statement rejected the Black Power slogan, repudiated violence, and restated the principles that had guided these civil rights leaders and their determination to secure full equality for African Americans. The statement's first point read: "We are committed to the attainment of racial justice by the democratic process.... We propose to win genuine partnership for all people in the United States, within the framework of this nation's constitution." The "Crisis and Commitment" statement file contains the full text of this statement and public reaction.

The "Bills" file and "Civil Rights" file show how the NAACP continued to work for the enactment of new civil rights legislation after 1965. These files reveal that in 1966, the NAACP, in conjunction with the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights (LCCR), drafted a bill entitled the "Civil Rights Protection Act of 1966." The bill included provisions for eliminating discrimination in jury selection and for the protection of civil rights workers in southern states. A fair housing provision was also added to the 1966 civil rights bill as Title IV. The 1966 civil rights bill was killed by a Senate filibuster; many commentators believed that Senate opposition to Title IV led to the bill's demise. In 1968, however, the Civil Rights Act of 1968, including an open housing provision, passed through both houses of Congress and was signed into law by President Johnson. The "Civil Rights—Bills" folder contains several items pertaining to the 1966 civil rights bill and the Civil Rights Act of 1968. There is a statement by William Levitt, president of Levitt and Sons Inc., on the 1966 civil rights bill. Levitt testified that he did not believe the open housing provision of the act would have a negative impact on the home-building industry. There is also a comparative analysis of the different versions of the 1966 civil rights bill. In a July 1, 1966, statement, SNCC Chairman Stokely Carmichael harshly criticized the bill. A draft of an article entitled "The Roll Call of Horror and Shame" describes some of the most notorious violence and murders of civil rights activists—and hence, the urgent need for passage of the bill. This file also contains telegrams from Roy Wilkins to members of the Senate urging a cloture vote followed by a vote in favor of the Civil Rights Act of 1968.

The "Civil Rights—Roy Wilkins, Civil Rights Statements" folder contains transcripts of Wilkins's testimony before the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee on the 1966 civil rights bill. Additional material pertaining to the enactment of new civil rights legislation can be found in the LCCR section of the "Leagues and Organizations" file, beginning at Frame 0119 of Reel 24 and ending at Frame 0120 of Reel 25. The LCCR was a coalition of about 110 major civil rights, labor, religious, civic, and fraternal groups. It formed in 1950 from the merger of the National Emergency Civil Rights Mobilization, led by Arnold Aronson and Roy Wilkins, and the National Council for a Permanent FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Commission), headed by A. Philip Randolph. A primary focus of the LCCR was the passage of national civil rights legislation, and its efforts were crucial in the passage of such legislation in 1957, 1960, 1964, 1965, and 1968. Wilkins served as chairman of the LCCR. These files contain Wilkins's statement on May 17, 1966, on the 1966 civil rights bill before Subcommittee #5 of the House Judiciary Committee. There is also a May 4, 1967, statement by Wilkins before the Subcommittee on Employment, Manpower, and Poverty of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare. In this statement, Wilkins discussed the proposed Equal Employment Opportunities Enforcement Act. His testimony before this committee showed that both the NAACP and the LCCR realized that civil rights legislation meant little if the laws were not enforced. To address the issue of enforcement, the LCCR created a Committee on Compliance and Enforcement. A report by this committee can be found at Reel 24, Frame 0602.

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 prohibits employers, labor unions, and employment agencies from discriminating on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. A January 9, 1967, letter from NAACP Labor Department Director Herbert Hill to Paul A. Brinker, a professor of economics at the University of Oklahoma, outlined the NAACP's extensive campaign against discrimination in employment. Hill wrote that since July 1965, when Title VII went into effect, the NAACP had filed over two thousand complaints with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) regarding Title VII violations. Hill explained that the complaints focused on "major sectors of the American economy...steel, textile, pulp and paper manufacturing, in shipbuilding, automobile and electrical manufacturing, in the chemical industry, also against major carriers in the trucking and railroad industry, banks and communications" (Reel 18, Frame 0766). The "Labor" files document some of the association's Title VII efforts, including the NAACP's complex relationship with organized labor. The "Labor" files are organized alphabetically by state and span from Frame 0962 of Reel 16 through Frame 0871 of Reel 18.

"Alabama" files cover the NAACP's complaints against the U.S. Steel Corporation and the United Steelworkers of America. In a May 1966 letter, Herbert Hill informed Roy Wilkins that, since September 1965, Hill had filed over fifty complaints with the EEOC, all of them on behalf of members of the Birmingham

NAACP branch. There are several documents pertaining to Birmingham branch members' plans to stage demonstrations because of the EEOC's failure to act on their case. A June 21, 1966, memorandum from Hill to Wilkins summarizes the case against the American Cast Iron Pipe Company in Birmingham. Following this memorandum is the EEOC report in the case of Pettway v. American Cast Iron Pipe Company.

"California" files include a statement by Roy Wilkins on the famous Delano grape strike that pitted the National Farm Workers Association (later the United Farm Workers) against California's powerful agribusinessmen. There is also a letter by West Coast Regional Director Leonard H. Carter to West Coast NAACP branches and youth councils on the Delano grape strike. The memorandum provides background on the strike and reminds NAACP members that the NAACP should support the strike, that they should boycott the products of the growers, and that no African Americans should serve as strikebreakers. Several other cases are covered in the "California" file. There is a letter by Leonard H. Carter to Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz informing him of employment discrimination in the Bay Area Rapid Transit system. There is also correspondence and a report on racial discrimination charges made against General Motors (GM) and the United Automobile Workers Local 1364 at the GM assembly plant in Fremont, California.

NAACP efforts to combat discrimination in the building and construction trades are documented in several files. In New Rochelle, New York, the NAACP branch staged demonstrations at the construction site of Macy's department store because of discriminatory hiring practices. The "New York State" file includes correspondence on this case and a copy of the New Rochelle Human Rights Commission report on employment discrimination at the site. The "Ohio" file contains a statement by Roy Wilkins on the case of Ethridge v. Rhodes, a major victory for the NAACP. In this case involving the building of a $12.8 million medical science building at Ohio State University, Judge Joseph Kinneary ruled that the state of Ohio could not enter into contracts with four companies because these companies permitted discriminatory hiring practices. In a statement on the case, Roy Wilkins announced:

We are calling upon our branches throughout the country to initiate programs designed to take advantage of the opportunities for expanded employment opened up by this decision.... The employment possibilities stemming from such action across the country are immense. We, as an organization, must exert every effort to see that Negro workers get a fair share of the estimated $76.5 billion construction funds scheduled to be allocated for the fiscal year, 1968.

This file also includes a memorandum from Herbert Hill on construction industry employment, which Wilkins used in making his remarks.

In 1966, in his testimony on the 1966 civil rights bill before the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Roy Wilkins stressed the importance of open housing legislation. He declared that continued bias in housing is nullifying gains made elsewhere in the fight against inequality. Residential segregation means segregation in schools, playgrounds, health facilities, and all other aspects of our daily lives. It is primarily responsible for the widespread segregation in North urban and suburban public schools.... The time has come to break the vicious circle that confines Negroes to second-class housing status (Reel 5, Frame 0720).

The 1966 civil rights bill passed in the House of Representatives, but a Senate filibuster killed the bill. In 1968 an open housing provision was passed as part of the Civil Rights Act of 1968. As noted above, there is documentation pertaining to open housing legislation in the "Civil Rights—Bills" folder (Reel 5, Frame 0227) and in the LCCR files (Reel 24, Frame 0119, through Reel 25, Frame 0120).

The "Housing" file contains materials on primarily state and local efforts to achieve open housing opportunities for African Americans. California was the location of one of the most important state housing controversies in which the NAACP became involved. A 1964 referendum, Proposition 14, invalidated two pieces of California fair housing legislation—the Unruh Civil Rights Act of 1959 and the Rumsford Fair Housing Act of 1963. In May 1966, however, the California Supreme Court declared Proposition 14 unconstitutional. The "Housing—California" file (Reel 13, Frame 0625) contains several NAACP press releases on this controversy. There is also a June 12, 1967, press release from the California Assembly Committee on Governmental Efficiency and Economy. The release summarized the findings of the committee's investigation of housing discrimination. The report found that discrimination by buildings was much more widespread than discrimination by individual homeowners. The committee also found that state and federal loans were often used to build segregated housing developments. The report, entitled "Fair Housing in California," follows the press release. An appendix to the report includes a copy of the Supreme Court decision in Reitman v. Mulkey, the case that invalidated Proposition 14. Other states covered in the "Housing" files are Connecticut, Illinois, Kentucky, New York, Ohio, and Pennsylvania. A sizable file of the NAACP Housing Department in Group VI of the NAACP Records collection at the Library of Congress further documents the NAACP housing efforts. (These records have not yet been microfilmed.) Earlier NAACP campaigns against housing discrimination can be found in University Publications of America's (UPA's) Papers of the NAACP, Part 5: The Campaign against Residential Segregation, 1914–1955, and Papers of the NAACP, Supplement to Part 5, Residential Segregation, General Office Files, 1956–1965.

The "Government" files span from Frame 0861 of Reel 8 through Frame 0477 of Reel 12. The "National" portion of these files document the NAACP's interactions with members of Congress and the NAACP's relationship with various federal agencies, particularly the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), the agency responsible for coordinating the War on Poverty. Within the OEO files, there is an important group of materials on the Child Development Group of Mississippi (CDGM), the Head Start program for the state of Mississippi (Reel 10, Frames 0600–1091; Reel 11, Frames 0001–0182). CDGM received its first grant in May 1965 and its mission was to provide preschool education to the economically disadvantaged children of Mississippi. CDGM, however, faced immediate opposition, particularly from the Mississippi congressional delegation. Senator John Stennis was able to arrange a Senate Appropriations Committee investigation of the group. The investigation revealed that CDGM had used some money to support civil rights workers in the state. These allegations, in turn, forced the OEO to conduct its own investigation. An October 2, 1966, OEO statement declared that, as determined by its own investigation, CDGM could not be refinanced in its “present organizational form.” The statement, however, also communicated that the OEO was “eager to maintain Head Start in Mississippi.” Its solution was a new agency called Mississippi Action for Progress Inc. (MAP), with NAACP Mississippi State Conference President Aaron Henry as one of its leaders. A national coalition of organizations denounced the OEO’s decision, and the Citizens Crusade Against Poverty coordinated the campaign to save CDGM.

The CDGM folders contain correspondence and other NAACP statements on the controversy. In an October 1, 1966, statement, Aaron Henry explained that he had received a call from the OEO explaining that a new group would have to be formed in order to save Head Start in Mississippi. According to his statement, Henry told the OEO that he felt CDGM should be refunded. He continued: “If it was absolutely impossible after all our efforts to refund CDGM, that to save the program, I would be willing to serve with another group” (Reel 10, Frame 0600). The national office of the NAACP also weighed in on the controversy. An October 7, 1966, telegram from John A. Morsell to OEO Director Sargent Shriver stated that the NAACP “regrets that the Office of Economic Opportunity has found it necessary to deny renewal of funding for CDGM” (Reel 10, Frame 0600). Morsell also expressed support for the MAP program.

The NAACP was drawn into the controversy further by a series of articles critical of both the OEO and the NAACP in The New Republic. In an October 15, 1966, editorial, The New Republic argued that the White House also played a key role in ensuring the demise of CDGM. The article continued: “The White House called Roy Wilkins, head of the NAACP, who in turn got in touch with Aaron Henry, a one-time Mississippi radical who has turned moderate; Henry agreed to be the other co-chairman [of MAP].” Roy Wilkins was outraged by this editorial, particularly because “the NAACP did not take orders from LBJ, pass them on Aaron Henry, and do in CDGM” (Reel 10, Frame 0827). The CDGM files also include correspondence between Wilkins and NAACP Legal Department General Counsel Robert L. Carter, discussing the possibility of bringing a libel case against The New Republic. Wilkins argued that bringing the suit was important because of the negative reaction to the article and because it distorted the NAACP’s position on a Head Start program in Mississippi. Wilkins restated that position in a December 5, 1966, letter to Sargent Shriver. He wrote:

Whatever reservations may be held regarding some aspects of the CDGM operation, I believe it is generally agreed that these programs genuinely benefited thousands of Mississippi Negro children.... If it is at all pertinent to your deliberation, I would wish to reiterate the readiness of the NAACP's Mississippi members and their leaders to participate at all levels in any renewed CDGM Head Start activity (Reel 10, Frame 0827).

The "Leagues and Organizations" portion of this edition documents the NAACP's relationship with many other organizations interested in the cause of civil and human rights. The "Leagues and Organizations" file begins at Frame 0872 of Reel 18 and continues to Frame 0165 of Reel 28. Among the organizations covered here are the A. Philip Randolph Institute, American Committee on Africa, American Jewish Committee, American Jewish Congress, American Negro Leadership Conference on Africa, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, Center for Urban Education, Citizens' Crusade Against Poverty, Congress of Racial Equality, Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, National Alliance of Postal and Federal Employees, National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, National Conference of Christians and Jews, National Council of Churches of Christ, National Urban League, Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Southern Regional Council, Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, and Urban Coalition.

Other topics covered in this edition of Papers of the NAACP include the relationship between African Americans and Jews, public reaction to the death of Martin Luther King Jr., the Meredith March Against Fear, the Mississippi Emergency Relief Program, the murder of Wharlest Jackson, the NAACP Special Contribution Fund, and the Poor People's Campaign. Prominent correspondents include Roy Wilkins, John A. Morsell, Arnold Aronson, Stokely Carmichael, Leonard H. Carter, Robert L. Carter, Kenneth B. Clark, Ramsey Clark, Gloster B. Current, Herbert Hill, Martin Luther King Jr., Floyd B. McKissick, Clarence Mitchell, Walter Reuther, Bayard Rustin, June Shagaloff, Sargent Shriver, Robert C. Weaver, and Whitney M. Young Jr.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics in this microform publication. The first number after an entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular file folder containing information on the subject begins. Hence, 17: 0518 directs the researcher to the folder that begins at Frame 0518 of Reel 17. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial section of this guide, the researcher will find the folder title, inclusive dates, and a list of Major Topics and Principal Correspondents, arranged in the order in which they appear on the film.
