TIAA-CREF “Cybrarian” Uses Push Technology, Custom Interfaces to Reach 7,000 Information Customers

The odds don't look great: 7,000 to one.

But at TIAA-CREF, Robin Sanders takes those odds—and makes them work for the organization. As TIAA's Director, Information Research, Sanders manages a virtual library capable of assisting any TIAA-CREF employee from their intranet.

At TIAA-CREF they call it the “Cybrary.”

“I'm a shop of one. I'm tasked with providing information to all of TIAA-CREF's more than 7,000 employees. I think that makes us unique. We provide LexisNexis® (services) to everyone,” Sanders says. “When we developed our current structure, we were very clear: We wanted to empower everyone to be able to perform their basic research.”

And that means a virtual platform, purely electronic with no print collection to update ... no physical library or overhead to maintain. However, with so many users at so many experience levels, Sanders has to make it friendly as well as powerful and inclusive.

“I'm tasked with providing information to all of TIAA-CREF's more than 7,000 employees. I think that makes us unique. We provide LexisNexis® (services) to everyone.”

—Robin Sanders
TIAA-CREF
Director, Information Research

She turns to LexisNexis for customized user interfaces and publishing tools as well as information. “We consider LexisNexis a partner, not just a vendor.”

For example, every morning—or whenever they need it—employees can go right to a customized Cybrary “newsstand” powered by nexis.com. They can select the latest edition of a must-have business publication, browse headlines and choose vital full text.

If employees need more in-depth or targeted research, the Cybrary offers more options, like moving to the nexis.com search form. The simple, fill-in-the-blank form is also front and center on the main Cybrary screen. Or click the Cybrary's Research Request tab to send a special research request for Sanders to explore. Users can also find topical news updates by clicking the Cybrary News Track tab.

Much intelligence gets pushed out to TIAA-CREF infoseekers through LexisNexis Publisher, which gives Sanders the ability to gather relevant articles and to publish or distribute them to TIAA-CREF business leaders via daily newsletters, e-mail or intranet updates. (Even incorporate RSS feeds, video and pictures.)

For example, Sanders says, one of her major publications is a daily Competitive & Market Intelligence Alert newsletter, which includes news about TIAA-CREF competitors and developments within the financial services industry. Sanders also sets up and manages alerts on several TIAA-CREF competitors.

Competitive Intelligence is also compiled on a special TIAA-CREF portal. “All of our professionals can go there and get updated on the competition immediately.”

Sanders also oversees a variety of other LexisNexis Publisher distributions covering Corporate Governance, Education Savings, the Wealth-Management industry—and up to 40 other vital topics for TIAA-CREF business units. Another alert tells the corporate communications team what the financial media is saying about TIAA-CREF. Sanders is also in the process of working with the TIAA-CREF legal department to create their own update newsletter.

The business units play an active role beyond requesting topics for LexisNexis Publisher. Unit volunteers act as “editors,” reviewing the articles Publisher retrieves and selecting those they deem most important. Sanders develops and continually fine tunes the alert searches and shows the editors the simple Publisher procedure for vetting relevant stories.

“That’s how I can do this solo. Plus, I have a strong LexisNexis customer team to assist me.”

Sanders meets regularly with LexisNexis Information Professional Consultant Nancy Gallenson. For more day-to-day service, Sanders works with LexisNexis National Account Manager Brian Doyle and Corporate Solutions Specialist/trainer Jodi Kreshover. With guidance from Sanders, Kreshover schedules and conducts nexis.com and research-area training sessions for TIAA-CREF employees. Have a question? Doyle and Kreshover even list their contact information on the Cybrary Contacts tab, along with Sanders and LexisNexis 24/7 Customer Support information.

Still, with more than 7,000 potential Cybrary patrons, one “cybrarian” with a dedicated team might have trouble staying on top of the organization’s rapidly evolving information needs.

“I am in a unique position.” Sanders admits. “But I have more than 25 years’ experience. This work is almost second nature to me. I try to get out there and talk to [colleagues]. ‘What are you working on? What trends are emerging?’”

“I reach out to every new senior business leader [at TIAA-CREF]. I send them a TIAA-CREF Cybrary welcome package. I speak to them directly about their interests, and I encourage them to talk to their employees about the Cybrary. I may not be able to get to every employee, but it translates down through senior management.”

Sanders also relies on input from her own business unit, the Market & Competitive Intelligence team, which is part of the TIAA-CREF Client Experience unit. They talk regularly in meetings about future Publisher topics.

“The Cybrary is pretty well known now [at TIAA-CREF]: If you want to know something, contact the Cybrary.”

Info Pro Sanders chooses LexisNexis Publisher to...

Create Newsletters

Robin Sanders synthesizes several months of competitive intelligence to produce a professional-looking quarterly newsletter, without waiting for Publisher training. “It’s very straightforward. The first time I did it myself with the [users’] guide. But it looked like there were 10 different librarians working on it.”

Attach Files to Newsletter Documents

Sanders not only selects and customizes articles for the various TIAA-CREF newsletters created with LexisNexis Publisher, she attaches the back-up research readers will need for further investigation. “I’m definitely running with this one.”

Report on the Most-Read Articles

Sanders generates usage reports by topic, by day—or even by document headline. It’s easy with the LexisNexis Publisher usage report features. Since the reports show percentage values and actual reader counts, the reports become de facto “most popular articles” lists she can share with readers. “Our readers like to know that. If everyone is reading something, they want to make sure they check it out as well.”

Tips of the Trade: Get More Efficiency From LexisNexis® Publisher

by Nancy Gallenson

LexisNexis Information Professional Consultant

Get more best practices and tips—and download a copy of the LexisNexis Publisher User Guide at the LexisNexis Publisher Resource Center located on the LexisNexis InfoPro Web site.

1. Get the Latest News on LexisNexis Publisher Enhancements (It's simple and without cost, of course.)

And get updates automatically. Here's how:

Under Editor Preferences—in the top-right corner of the LexisNexis Publisher home page—sign up for e-mail notifications about product updates.

2. Get Rid of Duplicate Documents Up Front

Turn on the Duplicate Detection feature for your account. (If it isn't on, or you are unsure, contact your LexisNexis account manager.) You may set up duplicate detection for all topics at once by going to the Organization Preferences link in the top-right corner of the LexisNexis Publisher home page. (Also see Tip 4.)

3. What are Your Customers Reading Most? Show Them!

Use the Report by Headline feature in LexisNexis Publisher to generate a list showing the number of times each article has been opened/read. Send out a list of top stories read this week! All the reports you can create may be found easily; just click the Administration tab on the LexisNexis Publisher home page.

Here's Why You're the Go-To Answer Person in Your Organization ...

Because you regularly supply needed information—sometimes before your users even realize they need it. That's the value of online publishing resources like LexisNexis Publisher.

But before you can push out the must-have news, you have to monitor the right topics.

So ... how do you choose your alert topics?

Do you wait for an information request on a topic?

Do your library customers—especially your C-suite—even know what you're capable of tracking?

Be proactive. Review the possibilities with your management. For example, do they know you can set up LexisNexis Alerts on:

The Businesses (and People) That Matter Most to Your Organization

Whether it's a competitor, partner, supplier/vendor, or even a potential takeover target, you have to know the latest news. Depending on the source you select, you can find insolvency/bankruptcy issues; recent patent and trademark filings, current SEC filings, company news releases, product launches, advertising/marketing strategies, current litigation and much more.

Industry Executive Changes and Appointments

Indexing terms (LexisNexis SmartIndexing Technology™ terms) make this Alert search much easier, for example:

SEARCH: TERMS(executive moves) AND automotive

Need more information on LexisNexis SmartIndexing Technology terms—how to use them, where to look them up, what sources have them? Check out the LexisNexis SmartIndexing Resource Center on the LexisNexis InfoPro Web site.

Industry Trends

Couldn't be easier. Go to the Industry Alerts box on your nexis.com Power Search form. Track up to 20 industries via industry reports, including Hoover's Industry Snapshots and Standard & Poor's Current Environment Reports. Just click the Create Alert link. Select an industry from the hierarchy.

Or create a specific search in specific news sources. LexisNexis SmartIndexing Technology terms can help. For example, monitor an evolving industry, e.g.:

SEARCH: TERMS(electric vehicle)

Legislative and/or Regulatory Changes

See what's happening in the U.S. Congress, state legislatures and U.S. and state administrative agencies on any vital topic, e.g.:

SEARCH: pension plans

Products and Services

What's the media—trade as well as general news—saying about your company's products and services? For example:

SEARCH: disability insurance

LexisNexis Alerts: Flexible Delivery Options

- View results online or have them delivered via e-mail.
- Deliver updates in a variety of formats, such as inline as TXT (perfect for wireless handheld devices), HTML or as an attachment in PDF, Word, RTF or HTML.
- Choose an Alert schedule that fits the topic—up to three times a day for breaking news. Or get updates daily (or business days), weekly or monthly. Even choose a manual, on-demand alert.
- Sometimes no news is the news you need. Set up a Nexis Alert from a "zero results set." And, on the Alert set-up screen, you can request "no new results" notifications to keep you in the know.
- Request an Alert from search results—or from a search in your History log. (From your search results, just click the clock icon at the top of your screen.)
- Save a natural-language search request for Alert update and adjust the number of documents in your results by relevance. (If you choose "Show fewer documents," your results will contain documents strongly related to your search terms.)

The Best of the Nexis® Service— With a Simple, Web-Search Interface: Nexis® Direct

Quick ... How many times each week do you get simple requests like “Give me everything on this person or company?” Or “Who are their competitors, and what are they doing?” Or “Who’s CEO or CLO?”

You’re glad to have the business, especially when the requests come from the C-suite. Still such requests take time—time you may need for more complicated research that only an information professional can tackle.

If simple search requests are sapping your productivity, then NexisDirect may be a good choice for your organization.

NexisDirect is a new resource that marries the vast, premium news and business content of the Nexis® service with a simple “Internet-type” interface.

So simple no training is required. Your executives who need tons of company and people information can use it right on their desktops. Staffers who research occasionally can tap in when they need it, without forgetting how. Here’s why:

- NexisDirect is organized around key tasks (research a company, person, industry, etc.) with the best and most relevant content brought to the forefront. Set screens, a simple search form and search buttons make research sessions more intuitive.
- Streamlined delivery also makes printing, saving and distributing results simple.
- Schedule e-mail alerts (up to 500 key words) updated hourly, daily, weekly or monthly.
- Tap into LexisNexis® Company Dossier—one search combines the results of dozens of resources into one information report.
- Search by relevance to improve results. Or search by date. Plus Boolean search options are available.
- Results “groups” allowing users to evaluate search results quickly through robust analysis by industries, companies, source types, etc.
- No search results limits.

Take a Closer Look at NexisDirect ...

That’s simple too. Just contact your Nexis account representative for details and a demonstration.

NexisDirect Offers Premium News & Business Sources

Get the premium content of the Nexis service, one of the world’s largest collection of news and business information sources. (And count on an archive of up to 35 years.)

TWEET! Now Follow Twitter Traffic Through nexis.com

The Newstex[®] Government & Politics Blogs source also offers "tweets." That's right. You can tap into the twittered thoughts of political pundits. The Newstex Congressional Twitter Feed also provides tweets from 144 Congressional Representatives. You won't find this content currently on Factiva[®] or Dialog[®].

Find out who is saying what on any politically charged issue. Use the PUBLICATION segment to home in on a specific representative. For example:

SOURCE: Newstex Government & Politics Blogs

SEARCH: publication (hatch)

The PUBLICATION segment lists the representative's name.

And the PUBLICATION segment can help you focus on tweets. Just as representatives' tweets are marked with their names, tweets from published blogs include a "via twitter" notation, e.g., Capital Eye Blog via Twitter. Check twitter traffic from a particular time period, about a specific issue, etc. For example:

SOURCE: Newstex Government & Politics Blogs

SEARCH: Publication (twitter) AND health care AND public option

Check the AMA Newspaper Physicians Read

American Medical News is the newspaper for America's physicians. Published by the American Medical Association, it's one of the most widely read U.S. publications on news affecting the medical profession. American Medical News is not currently available via Factiva or Dialog.

The large circulation cuts across geographic regions, practice settings and medical specialties. It presents concise but detailed information not provided by the lay press, and a socioeconomic, practice-oriented slant not found in clinical journals.

Sections, including Government & Medicine, Professional Issues, Business, Editorials, Health & Science make it easier to find the news you need. For example, SEARCH: SECTION(government) AND hipaa

Here's Breaking Medical News from 30 Countries ...

Breaking medical news—plus exclusive medical stories, features and columns by physician experts. Also find medical journal summaries. Now at nexis.com, Elsevier Global Medical News (EGMN) is a worldwide daily medical news service syndicated in more than 30 countries, reaching physicians throughout North America, Europe, Asia/Pacific, Latin America and Africa.

This syndicated medical news service supplies fresh news continuously to physician Web sites, e-newsletters and RSS feeds. Twenty-four specialized “channels”—including a top medical news channel—feed e-content to digital publications supported by pharmaceutical and healthcare manufacturers, medical societies, and academic institutions. The content is also available to corporate and enterprise intranets.

Search the full text—or use your favorite key words, (LexisNexis SmartIndexing Technology™ terms), e.g., SEARCH: SUBJECT(multiple sclerosis). Another example: Find articles from the top medical news channel with TERMS, e.g., SEARCH: TERMS (top stories) AND flu OR influenza

Capture the Views of the Government's Financial Crisis Leaders

Financial Market Regulatory Wire, provided by CQ Financial Transcripts, gives you access to the public statements, interviews and Congressional testimony of key government officials who are responsible for the government's intervention in the financial markets crisis. Also find testimony from economists, industry executives and more.

Blogs, Video and Audio—in French! LexisNexis Now Gives You More News Options

The Nexis® service offers you thousands of resources. But coverage is only part of the story.

Big content numbers don't mean much unless it's the right content. So, just as you strive to stay close to your customers, LexisNexis keeps a keen eye trained on the information horizon so we can proactively license the must-have news your customers will need as their business evolves.

For example, in the last year LexisNexis has expanded:

- Non-U.S. news resources. Reflecting today's global economy, nearly 40 percent of LexisNexis news content is published outside of the United States. That's more than 7,300 sources. (In just the first 90 days of 2009, 60 news and business sources from outside the United States were released.)
 - Specialized resources that help your patrons understand the current economic crisis, such as the newly released Financial Market Regulatory Wire, covered at left.
- Even media itself is changing, and LexisNexis is working to bring your library:
- Reliable blogs. The LexisNexis news collection now includes more than 3,000 blogs—all editorially selected for quality, content and update schedules. And archives are maintained so the source stays valuable.
 - Video and audio coverage. Now find video-enabled and audio-enabled transcripts in the LexisNexis News collections.
