

Gain strategic advantages and make more informed business decisions with the vast LexisNexis® News and Business Collection.

LexisNexis has a diverse collection that includes traditional and new media; general and legal news; company and people information; and local, regional, national, and international news. We have up-to-the-minute information and deep archives that can help you in critical ways.

Plan more effective case strategies by using news and business information to track developments in your practice areas; review commentary about pending lawsuits; follow press coverage of important cases; see how recent decisions are playing out; and learn about trials, judges, parties, expert witnesses, jury awards, and settlements in cases like yours. We offer many legal news sources, including Mealey™ reports and various law journals.

Get a more comprehensive picture of current or prospective clients and the issues they face by using news and business information to monitor them and their industries and gain insight into stories that might affect their businesses activities. We provide many company/financial sources, including D&B® business reports, Hoover's® company records, and SEC filings.

Make more informed business decisions by using news and business information to stay on top of industry trends, evaluate possible mergers or expansions, ensure you're compliant with regulations, check economic forecasts, and conduct background and conflict checks on potential new hires. We offer RDS business and industry information, and merger and acquisition company reports, for example.

LexisNexis® News and Business Collection interface showing various news and business sources categorized by type (e.g., News & Business, Individual Publications, Company & Financial, Market & Industry, Science & Technology, Country & Region, Featured Content & Services). The interface includes search filters, checkboxes for source selection, and a 'Key' section explaining the checkboxes.
