

A more efficient litigation tool to find the information you need

A single online page now provides easy access to powerful tools—for tasks like legal research, document drafting, case investigation, and even business development. It's the LexisNexis® Federal Litigation Research Task Page.

“With quick access to the most relevant litigation tools and sources, I spend less time researching and more time preparing my case strategy.”

The LexisNexis Federal Litigation Research Task Page

- All the databases you need
- All on one page
- All at no additional cost

Innovative resources and names you trust

The LexisNexis Federal Litigation Research Task Page offers quick access to information from names like:

- Shepard's[®]
- Matthew Bender[®]
- Mealey Publications
- Martindale-Hubbell[®]

And you can easily link to newer resources, such as:

- LexisNexis[®] CourtLink[®] for thorough court record and document research
- LexisNexis[®] Applied Discovery[®], the leading electronic discovery provider

Whatever you need, the LexisNexis Federal Litigation Research Task Page offers a strategic advantage: efficient access to timely, pertinent information.

All just a click away

Just sign on to the LexisNexis services at www.lexis.com

- Go to the top set of tabs on your screen and select the Research Tasks tab.
- Click the Federal Litigation link, and you're there.

You can make the Research Tasks tab your default main page:

- Click the Preferences link in the top-right portion of your screen.
- On the left under Start Location, click the Research Tasks radio button.

Now you'll start from the Research Tasks page whenever you sign on.

Efficiency, innovation, and client service

Benefit from our innovative CourtLink[®] service, listed under LexisNexis Products on the right-hand side of the Federal Litigation Research Task Page. The CourtLink service can help you gain efficiency, hone your strategy, and serve clients more proactively:

- Gain insight into an opposing party's litigation history, understand opposing counsel's experience in a particular area of law, and even identify arguments that a judge found compelling in the past—all through strategic profiles drawn from the largest and most comprehensive collection of online court records.
- Be the first to know when court activity affects your clients and cases. CourtLink[®] Alert and Track services can be customized to notify you of key events in your cases as soon as they occur.

Your subscription to the LexisNexis[®] services includes access to the Federal Litigation Research Task Page. Some linked products may be provided at a transactional charge, depending on your subscription. Such products are indicated by a $ on the source selection screen before you search. Details are available on the "i" information link next to the source name. Other restrictions may apply.

At-A-Glance Federal Litigation Research Task Page

Quickly search through case law, statutes, and news.

Get the latest legal news from U.S. Law Week, Mealey's, and other valuable sources.

Conduct investigative research using public records, including person locators, court filings, criminal history information, real property records, and much more.

Search federal treatises and analytical materials from Matthew Bender—or go to a source's Table of Contents.

Search civil jury instructions by court (federal or state) or by case type (e.g., product liability).

Conduct full-text searches through forms databases or go to the related Table of Contents.

Review other secondary sources, such as law reviews, AmJur, Restatements, and more.

Benefit from litigation task-based searching: Click a link, select choices from pull-down menus, and either retrieve relevant results or run your own search.

Search specific primary sources via specialized templates.

Access more litigation information, practice tips, headline legal news, user guides, and more.

See what other products and services LexisNexis offers litigators.

Link to related Web sites, including the ABA Section of Litigation, NITA, and more.

The main part of the page links to resources litigators use most, from case law and statutes to factual investigation databases, analytical materials, jury instructions, and more. Search these sources directly or, where available, go to an expandable Table of Contents.

The right side provides links to dynamic searching tools (under What Do You Need To Do Today?) search templates, free resources, litigation-oriented Web sites, and additional litigation-related products and services from LexisNexis.

More ways to benefit

- Investigate an expert, judge, juror, arbitrator, company, or attorney.
Access and quickly search sources using the Investigate Judges, Experts, etc. link (under What Do You Need To Do Today?)
- Keep up with developments in litigation.
Use the Litigation News & Mealey's NewsBriefs task box to run automated searches on specific litigation topics (e.g., asbestos, construction defects, mold litigation).
- Educate yourself about medical conditions.
Use the Learn about Injuries & Disorders link (under What Do You Need To Do Today?) to find information about diagnoses, complications, treatments, and appropriate medical tests—along with checklists of important things to consider—all in layman's terms.
- Run a quick search to find relevant case law.
For example, in the Search Primary Law task box, click the Federal Cases, Combined Courts radio button, enter your search terms, and click Search. Quick and efficient.
- Efficiently process enormous volumes of discoverable documents.
Click the Applied Discovery link under LexisNexis Products to learn about our comprehensive electronic discovery services. You can process hundreds of thousands of electronic documents at a fraction of the time and cost of manual review. We can help you avoid spoliation claims, reduce costs, save time, and produce better results.

With the Federal Litigation Research Task Page, you'll never have to look far to find the tools and sources you need.

Expert support around the clock

The Federal Litigation Research Task Page is designed for easy access with minimal effort. And as always, LexisNexis Customer Support is ready to help with any questions you may have, 24/7. Whether you need to find an important fact quickly, conduct in-depth research, receive technical help, or arrange training tailored to your specific needs, we're always ready. You can reach your account executive or a knowledgeable specialist by calling 800-543-6862.

For more information on the LexisNexis Federal Litigation Research Task Page, contact your account executive.

