

Global Law, News & Business Resources from the LexisNexis® Services

For in-house counsel, your home port in a world of risk.

From increasing globalization and transnational investment to privacy laws, supply chain compliance, trade sanctions and beyond ... your role in today's international business environment is fraught with complex challenges.

With those challenges come significant risks to your company—particularly with government agencies now prosecuting in-house counsel for violations charges once primarily filed against businesses alone.

Furthermore, domestic and international laws increasingly view internal corporate counsel as both “lawyers,” who are afforded historical attorney-client privileges, as well as “employees” who are expected to act as whistleblowers, gatekeepers and watchdogs. How can you keep up with and deliver the best advice on these often competing and contradictory laws to protect yourself and your company?

Meet the challenges facing your corporate law department with an unparalleled collection of international and foreign domestic legal resources

Make the LexisNexis® services your one-stop solution for mitigating risk as you handle the complex international and foreign domestic legal issues your company faces today. It's a difficult task made even more challenging as corporate law departments continue to bring more work in house to increase efficiencies and control costs.

Whether it's researching or monitoring the laws, customs and precedents of foreign jurisdictions ... negotiating with governmental entities ... evaluating risk ... exploring business opportunities ... or deciding whether to keep certain matters in house or hand them over to outside counsel—LexisNexis offers the resources you need to help determine the best course of action.

Quickly navigate to the resources you need now with this handy guide

We've prepared this resource guide to introduce you to the broad selection of international and foreign domestic legal resources LexisNexis has to offer your law department. See the following pages for comprehensive listings by country and source available through the LexisNexis services.
