You told us you want transparent and easier-to-understand pricing.

With Lexis Advance™ you only pay for the documents you access. Unlimited searching is now available at no additional charge.

With your Lexis Advance subscription there's no longer a charge when you click the search button.* We've changed the pricing, so instead of pay per search, you will only incur a charge when you access the document you've searched outside of your subscription. And if you are an existing customer, Lexis Advance is included at no additional cost to your lexis.com® subscription.

Your search universe has also expanded. You will now be able to search across all our available content and the open Web, giving you the confidence that you have run the most comprehensive search all in one place ... and without fear of running up a big bill. For subscribers, there's no charge for running a search on Lexis Advance across all available content (not just the content you subscribe to) so you have the confidence of comprehensive results.

*Customers who do not have a qualifying monthly flat-rate subscription will be charged a monthly Lexis Advance access fee which is calculated based on the total number of non-Public Records searches times $60. The access fee is waived for all other customers.

Class Certification under Dukes al. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc

Summary

Dukes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., is a landmark class action opinion. The Ninth Circuit, en banc, affirmed a panel decision that approved the certification of a sweeping nationwide employment discrimination class, and described and clarified the standards under which class actions may be certified. The defendant has petitioned for certiorari, and the opinion raises several critical issues that have divided the courts of appeals.

At the bottom of the modal, there are two main options:

- Get the full document now (with a "Purchase" button)
- Save to a folder for purchase later (with a "Select a folder" dropdown, a "New Folder" button, and a "Save" button)

A "Cancel" button is also present. The background of the screenshot shows search results for "employment discrimination", including a list of "Keywords" and a snippet of a document titled "1-2 Civil Rights Actions P 2.04".
