- See how an issue has been treated by federal and state administrative agencies.
- Take advantage of forms, briefs, pleadings, and motions to help you draft documents more quickly and effectively.
- Get the benefit of expert analysis on novel or unfamiliar issues with our unsurpassed collection of treatises and analytical materials—including exclusive Matthew Bender[®] titles.
- Take advantage of expert analysis of emerging legal issues so you can evaluate risk in anticipation of legislation or court decisions.
- Investigate people, businesses, and property.
- Find background information on judges, attorneys, law firms, arbitrators, and other professionals in our collection of directories.
- Keep abreast of the latest news with our unparalleled collection of news sources.

And you can stay on top of new developments, such as clients in the news, legislative impact, or cases on a particular topic. Once you've run a search and reviewed the results, just click the Save as Alert link and enter your delivery options.

Tip: For even easier access to an Area of Law page you use frequently, you can create a custom tab to display along with the five standard tabs (My Sources, Legal, News & Business, Public Records, and Find a Source) on the main lexis.com page.

- While viewing a particular Area of Law page, just click the link that appears at the end of your source-selection path, for example: Legal > Area of Law – By Topic > Banking & Financial Services (Add “Banking” as a tab).
- Or from any lexis.com screen, click the Add/Edit Tabs link. From the Add Edit Tabs screen, you can create custom tabs, choose the order in which your custom tabs should appear, and even choose to have any of the standard or custom tabs display at the beginning of each research session.

Would you like easy access to a wealth of powerful resources and tools to help you perform typical research tasks, stay on top of practice-area news, and more?

Area of Law pages at lexis.com offer the key resources and tools you need, all in a single, easy-to-use interface, organized to match a practitioner's workflow. Go to lexis.com, click the Legal tab under Option 2—Look for a Source. Click Area of Law—By Topic, and you'll find pages covering 63 areas of interest (see the screen above).

Ways you can use Area of Law pages to your advantage:

- Use our comprehensive collection of federal and state cases to learn how your issue has been treated previously or to get background on a particular judge, attorney, or litigant.
- Check federal and state legislation and regulations, including exclusive LexisNexis 50-State Surveys, which save valuable time you might otherwise spend searching across multiple sources.
