

Get Increased Confidence in Your Research

Choose the right tools

You want your research to be complete, accurate, and on time. The LexisNexis® services offer the best option to help you find and deliver current, comprehensive information.

You'll find many differences between the LexisNexis services and the competition. These differences will help you achieve the confidence you need to stand out and be noticed. Read on (and for more tips, see the Efficient, Cost-Effective Research on lexis.com® tip sheet:

Let your lexis.com® case-law searches bring you more relevant content—automatically!

Don't miss critical information! Each lexis.com case-law search digs deeper—providing access to more relevant content, offering greater insights, and giving you more value from your LexisNexis subscription.

LexisNexis® Related Content acts as a virtual roadmap to more rich editorial content—even to sources you may not have considered—with no additional source selection or searches required! These additional relevant materials appear organized conveniently in a single, easy-to-browse pane next to a full-text case you've retrieved with your original search. From there, link to an exclusive combination of analytical resources, including:

- LexisNexis Briefs, Pleadings & Motions, official report PDFs, and court documents
- Lexis® Case in Brief—with links to news coverage, dockets, and additional case details
- Emerging Issues Analysis written by Matthew Bender®, Mealey's™, and Martindale-Hubbell® authors
- ALR®, Am Jur®, and state jurisprudences such as Witkin
- Matthew Bender treatises plus U.S. and state practice guides
- More BNA® legal analysis than other online sources

Link worry-free. If it's in your plan, pay the same low document-retrieval rate you pay now! If it's not, see the price before you link out—a LexisNexis exclusive.

(See separate "LexisNexis® Related Content" tip sheet for more information.)

Choose a modern, user-friendly case classification system

Forget about key numbers and old-fashioned classifications based on case-law digests! LexisNexis offers thousands of easy-to-find legal topics, including today's emerging legal trends.

LexisNexis Search by Topic or Headnote allows you to choose your legal topic. Just enter a word or two or click through one of 40+ practice areas to find the precise topic you need for on-point results. Not just case law, but statutes, agency materials, treatises, law reviews, and even recent news. One search delivers it all.

Or get all relevant LexisNexis headnotes. Then move directly to the most-cited cases. View detailed court discussions on your topic. Find your on-point headnote? With one click on the More Like This Headnote link, you can move directly to cases with comparable headnotes—closest match first.

Topics are updated regularly to keep you current with new legal developments. That's the advantage of a classification system built for today's technology rather than printed digests.

Go with the most comprehensive collection of summarized and headnoted case law

LexisNexis offers 53% more cases with both summaries and headnotes from the past 20 years than our closest competitor. And all LexisNexis primary and secondary law goes through thorough editorial review: LexisNexis editors have validated and/or corrected the accuracy of millions of cases, statutes, court rules, and treatise citations.

Plus, LexisNexis headnotes are the only headnotes written by legal experts who draw from the precise language of the court—not from editors' interpretations. You see the black letter law and the precise facts of the case. Then LexisNexis® Case Summaries are added, supplementing headnotes with reviews written by experienced attorney-editors. Double advantage! You get a clearly better combination—the court's own language and expert analysis. And you know the difference as you make your decisions.

And only LexisNexis lets you move from any on-point LexisNexis headnote you find in a case directly to additional relevant headnotes. Just click once and get More Like This Headnote. Or Retrieve All Headnotes on a topic.

Be confident it's still good law with Shepard's® Citations Service

Length of discussion does not equal depth of discussion. Only Shepard's gives you true depth of coverage and the full spectrum of analysis. Shepard's legal editors read each case to find out how the judge treated it, not how long the judge discussed it. (If you rely on a citator that values length of discussion alone, a court's short statement—"We expressly disapprove of the lower court's interpretation."—gets a low rating. Yet it could make or break your case.

Plus, find more complete, in-depth analyses, including "True Positive" and "Questioned By" treatments. If you view only negative treatment, you get half the story and may miss instances where one jurisdiction ruled negatively on a case while another affirmed it.

The Shepard's Summary brings all this key information—like links to negative and positive references, on-point LexisNexis headnotes, and more—right to the top of the report. Decide what's important quickly. Other citators bury all but the most negative references.

Link and go! Even link directly to discussions in citing cases similar to those issues in your case's LexisNexis headnotes. And Shepard's also cites to several hundred law reviews and several hundred Matthew Bender treatise documents.

(See separate "Shepard's® Citations Service" tip sheet for more information.)

Use the most-cited expert analysis

Beyond cases and codes—including exclusives like U.S. Code Service and Lawyer's Edition—you also get authoritative legal analyses that judges rely on more often and cite to in court more often than other publishers. For example:

- Moore's Federal Practice® A Matthew Bender flagship treatise on federal procedure, Moore's Federal Practice extensive commentary and analysis of the rules and cases interpreting the rules, is cited hundreds of times annually in judicial opinions and law reviews. While the analysis on every page of Moore's Federal Practice strives to reflect the current state of the law, the main text of Wright and Miller is rarely updated. Many volumes are out of date, some by more than ten years. And Wright and Miller supplements contain little analysis.
- California Forms of Pleading and Practice The essential resource for California practitioners combines all the legal research you need with checklists and an unparalleled collection of forms.
- Collier on Bankruptcy® Long recognized as the most authoritative and comprehensive single source of bankruptcy law information, Collier is cited in hundreds of opinions each year.
- New York Civil Practice: CPLR (Weinstein, Korn & Miller) The leading New York litigation treatise. During the past five years, it has been cited more frequently than Seigel's—and New York civil practice attorneys get a more comprehensive, easier-to-research, and authoritative source.
- Appleman on Insurance Law and Appleman on Insurance Current Critical Issues in Insurance: Get more complete coverage of the various jurisdictions' positions than Couch—a vitally important difference in the state-law driven subject of insurance law.
- Plus, the LexisNexis Briefs collection is the one focused on quality, not quantity. Briefs don't have the same shelf life as case decisions. The highest value briefs are in the 12- to 18-month range. Competitors may claim more documents, but many are very dated, and thus are of less value. LexisNexis Briefs are more current and reviewed by highly qualified legal editors, making them more valuable to you.

Discover nearly double the number of news and business resources

No research is complete until you've searched news and business resources at lexis.com. Sometimes facts—who, what, and how—are as important as law. Just ask the partners negotiating a business venture, checking out potential clients, or sizing up the competition.

You can't stake the firm's reputation on anything less than rock-solid authority. LexisNexis delivers access to critical content—20,000+ trusted news, business, and financial sources from around the world. That's nearly twice the resources of any other provider. For example:

- All top-100 U.S. newspapers, such as The Wall Street Journal®—a LexisNexis exclusive offering to the legal market—and The New York Times®, along with many same-day sources such as newswires and news transcripts.

- Trade and industry sources such as Dun & Bradstreet®, Hoover's®, and MERGERSTAT®.
- Key legal publications, such as The Testifying Expert.
- Plus, news documents available via lexis.com are tagged with tens of thousands of index terms so you can easily pinpoint articles by companies, organizations, people, geographic locations, subject, and more.
- And there's more. Whenever you need a broad reach into news and business—like really understanding a company, its partners, vendors, competitors, and industry—you've got it. Choose source groups or create your own customized groups of sources to research. Or use LexisNexis® Company Dossier and LexisNexis® Industry Dossier that collate and deliver multiple news and business results into a single, easy-to-navigate report you can send straight to a partner's desk.

(See separate "News content on lexis.com" tip sheet for more information.)

Investigate 585 million people and 381 million businesses with LexisNexis public records

Gain access to one of the most comprehensive sets of public and proprietary records available. LexisNexis is one of the leading providers of information on people and businesses (and their assets). You can find difficult-to-detect information on and connections between individuals and entities which can have significant effects on your clients.

Find records on more than 585 million unique individuals, on more than 381 million unique businesses. Locate witnesses, lost heirs, even people who don't want to be found.

In addition to public records, get Gramm-Leach-Bliley-compliant proprietary data, bankruptcy and court filings, incorporation documents, judgments, jury verdicts & settlements, real and personal property records, professional licenses, sanctions, UCC liens, and voter registrations.

And the advanced technology provides meaningful reports so you can quickly uncover and link people and businesses you might otherwise not identify within billions of single records. And to make things even better, you can send these easy-to-review reports to managers.

LexisNexis even provides hard-to-uncover information such as employment information, liquor licenses, IRS Enrolled Agents, and Inactive Business Directory information that you won't find via other services. Don't say "I couldn't find it" until you check LexisNexis.

Plus, a powerful new interface even shows you search results in sources outside your subscriptions. You can add this information if you need it—no new subscription needed. Try to get that from competitors.

(See separate "Public records on lexis.com" tip sheet for more information.)