

Ransomware: Insurance, Data Manipulation and Best Practices

The best way to deal with a ransomware is to not get attacked. Preventing a ransomware attack requires more than good security. There are many considerations clients need to be aware of, including their insurance coverage.

Get expert analysis and practical guidance for preventing ransomware attacks below:

EXPERT ANALYSIS: Preparing for Data Manipulation Attacks

APPLEMAN: Examining First-Party Coverage Under Cyber Risk Policies

LEXIS PRACTICE ADVISOR: Ransomware Planning and Responses Best Practices

Large Scale Attacks Make You “WannaCry”

“The scale and scope of the cybercrimes alleged by the complaint is staggering and offensive to all who respect the rule of law and the cyber norms accepted by responsible nations,” Assistant Attorney General John Demers said. North Korean Man Charged With Sony Hack, WannaCry Virus, Law360, September 6, 2018.