SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection from the State Department records at the National Archives focuses on the activities of the Vietnam Working Group, a special group formed in the State Department's Bureau of Far Eastern Affairs in 1963 to deliberate on U.S. policy in Vietnam. Over the life of the group, members included Chalmers B. Wood, James M. Montgomery, Thomas F. Conlon, Theodore J. C. Heavner, Joseph Brent, H. Freeman Matthews Jr., and Paul M. Kattenburg. Members corresponded with many people in the State Department and collected reports on a wide array of topics related to Vietnam.

The papers of the Vietnam Working Group reflect the significant increase in U.S. economic and military aid to Vietnam under President John F. Kennedy. The papers begin with materials from 1963 pertaining to the U.S. Operations Mission (USOM) in Vietnam and other U.S. economic aid programs to Vietnam. Minutes of staff meetings of USOM for 1963 cover a broad range of aid topics, including agricultural assistance, industrial development, public health programs, and public works programs.

In particular, USOM meeting minutes describe the successes and failures of the strategic hamlet program, which was a major part of the U.S. counterinsurgency effort in South Vietnam by 1963. The minutes of a May 8 meeting, for example, note that USOM would open eight new training schools for strategic hamlet teachers on May 27. At a May 29 USOM meeting, USOM Vietnam director Joseph Brent reported on a trip to Phan Tiet for the opening of one of these new training schools. At a May 1 meeting, USOM discussed the successful program at Quang Ngai, as well as the inability of USOM to set up any program in An Giang province because of the large Viet Cong presence. The AID files also highlight other important parts of the U.S. counterinsurgency effort, such as the Commercial Import Program (CIP), a program designed to help build the social and economic infrastructure in South Vietnam.

Another major series of documents covers defense affairs. Several items address the problem of U.S. bombing in South Vietnam and the possibility of alienating the local population. In addition, a February 1963, paper from the Foreign Service Institute raises the issue of decreasing U.S. military involvement in Vietnam. This issue is further addressed in a file on a May 6, 1963, meeting with Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara in Honolulu, Hawaii (Reel 1, Frame 0369). One of the items on the meeting agenda was a plan to withdraw 1,000 U.S. military personnel by December 1963 and to decide on the number of U.S. military personnel needed in Vietnam as of July 1, 1964. An October 18, 1963, memorandum from Paul M. Kattenburg to Roger Hilsman comments further on the issues of troop withdrawals and the overall number of U.S. military personnel in Vietnam (Reel 1, Frame 0380).

The largest group of documents in this collection covers political matters. Vietnam's Buddhist community attracted worldwide attention in 1963 due to a series of demonstrations against the policies of the Catholic-led government. The origins of the Buddhist issue are covered in a background study prepared by Dr. Wesley R. Fishel from September 1963 (Reel 2, Frame 0062). Other materials in the collection survey the mass protests of Buddhists and university students, which helped to overthrow the presidency of Ngo Dinh

Diem. Documents reflect the U.S. government's increasing disfavor with Diem policies because of repressive measures against the Buddhists and other factors. This collection covers the withdrawal of U.S. support for Diem's government, which resulted in the military coup and the president's execution in the fall of 1963.

During 1963, Buddhist protesters prompted the tirades of President Diem's sister-in-law, Madame Ngo Dinh Nhu, whose comments and actions are presented in the collection's materials. Documents show that Madame Nhu's statements to the press about the self-immolation of Buddhist demonstrators made her a disastrous spokeswoman for her brother-in-law. Documents from 1964 reflect Madame's Nhu's bitterness toward the U.S. after her husband's and Diem's execution by military officers. Documents also show Madame Nhu's attempts to obtain a visa from the State Department for a return to Vietnam in 1964.

This collection details the infiltration by Vietcong into South Vietnam and its strikes against strategic hamlets (Reel 1, Frame 0688). Materials address North Vietnamese infiltration through Laos and the U.S. proposal in 1965 of a Laos highway project to block passage into South Vietnam (Reel 6, Frame 0304). Documents also cover military assistance to the Vietcong from North Vietnam and China.

This collection contains much material on Vietnam's Chieu Hoi program, which was established to encourage defection of Vietcong members and the North Vietnamese. Documents cover U.S. attempts to undermine insurgent activities in Vietnam's villages through reconciliation and pacification policies. Materials in the collection show that pacification efforts promoted nation building through strengthening Vietnam's infrastructure, building schools, and implementing agricultural reform.

Other materials in the collection cover the U.S. Senate's debate on the Gulf of Tonkin resolution, which gave President Lyndon B. Johnson authority to take "all necessary measures" for maintaining peace in Southeast Asia. Congress passed the joint resolution on August 7, 1964, only five days after an attack by North Vietnamese torpedo boats on a U.S. destroyer. Documents include texts of the Senate Committee hearings with testimony from Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Defense McNamara in support of passage of the resolution. Documents also present statements from Senator Wayne Morse (D, Ore.) in opposition to the resolution.

Apart from the specific documents mentioned above, this collection consists generally of memoranda, reports, correspondence, policy studies, and briefing papers. The materials are organized chronologically by year, and within each year, in alphabetical order by subject. The major subjects covered are U.S. economic assistance to Vietnam (AID), defense affairs (DEF), and political affairs (POL).

NOTE ON SOURCES

The materials microfilmed for this publication are reproduced from Record Group 59, Records of the Department of State, Subject Files of the Vietnam Working Group, 1963–1966, Entry 5305, Lot Files 67-D-54, 68-D-84, 69-D-67, 70-D-102, 70-D-232 and 70-D-233, National Archives, College Park, Maryland.

EDITORIAL NOTE

Records created or filed at the State Department can be found in Record Group 59. This Record Group is comprised of two types of records: the Central Files, records originating from various embassies and consulates, other agencies, and within the State Department itself; and “Special Files” or Lot Files, which are records maintained outside of the Central Files and originating in various offices, bureaus, and committees in the State Department. In addition, Lot Files relate to certain administrative functions, individuals, other organizational units, or special subjects or events.

The records microfilmed in the publication were created, collected, and collated by the Vietnam Working Group within the Bureau of Far Eastern Affairs. Upon transmittal to the National Archives, these records were assigned the following Lot numbers by the State Department: 67D54, 68D84, 69D67, 70D102, 70D232 & 70D233. These Lot Files comprise all of the available Vietnam Working Group’s Subject Files.

UPA made its selection of these Special Files to microfilm after extensive research of archival indexes for records relating to the internal and foreign affairs of Vietnam, U.S. foreign policy in Southeast Asia, and Vietnam’s special role in the Cold War.

These records have been microfilmed in their original archival order, as filed by the State Department, and in their entirety as available at the National Archives.
