

Gain more insight on significant, emerging case law with LexisNexis® Cases in Brief

When your case preparation calls for detailed analysis of current, high-profile, emerging law and significant cases, LexisNexis Cases in Brief can help you quickly gain the insight you need.

LexisNexis Cases in Brief focus on hundreds of important cases—from those being heard in the U.S. Supreme Court this term to key cases in various practice areas, cases of first impression and cases in the news.

Available exclusively from LexisNexis®, this timesaving research tool provides an extensive, downloadable report written by experienced attorney-editors. The Case in Brief includes legal analysis, an expanded summary of the case and links to research content and court documents.

Thorough, Quick, Convenient

The LexisNexis Case in Brief provides a single source of information about a case, the parties involved, related cases and associated points of law. The Case in Brief comes as a PDF with quick links connecting you to a comprehensive collection of relevant online material.

Pivotal details and perspectives

Each LexisNexis Case in Brief provides a clear outline linking you to sections of expert analysis:

Enhanced Procedural Posture

gives greater detail regarding the procedural steps occurring with the case.

Explanation of the Parties

focuses on the actual roles and relationships of the parties in addition to the procedural designations.

Parties' Arguments

describe arguments raised by the parties and the court's ruling on each. You can link to the section of the case with the decision on each argument.

Quick Holding Bullets

briefly state the court's holding on each issue and link to the case section discussing each holding.

Enhanced Overview

gives a detailed analysis of the facts, rationale and holdings in a bulleted, topical format.

Dissenting and Concurring Opinion Overviews

provide you with brief summaries of those opinions.

Expanded Headnotes

include LexisNexis® Headnotes, drawn directly from the court's language, plus interpretive headnotes with editorially enhanced information on important holdings not already framed in a concise headnote by the court.

Status of the Case

lists and discusses prior and subsequent opinions to help you quickly determine which cases are most relevant. Prior history includes decisions that appear in the Shepard's® Citations Service, plus a short overview of developments and holdings for each decision that preceded the current case in the litigation. Each citation links directly to that case.

Comparative Case Content

concisely phrases the issues in the case and lists cases that make major holdings for and against the issues in this case.

Notable Case Analysis

provides editorial reasoning on why this case is important and what the court added or changed about the law.
