Juris® Suite Core Reporting Module

Help increase partner income with real time relevant information tailored for each individual at the firm and delivered how and when they need it to make decisions.

Juris® Suite revolutionizes how information is developed, distributed and used for decision making. Forget the traditional notion of long, highly detailed reports that are only available well after the relevant decision-making window has passed. Juris Suite turns the old-fashioned reporting model on its head by allowing each individual at the firm to decide exactly what information they want, how they want to see it and use it, and when they get it. Moreover, management information will have utility beyond simply reading a report. Juris Suite content can be used to navigate or drill-down to detailed information underlying the management report. Content can be manipulated and extracted into other applications like Microsoft® Excel® to allow for quick and easy analysis. Never again will you have to hear, "The software can't provide that report" or, "That will take days to do." Virtually any relevant management information model can be constructed and deployed using Juris Suite.

Law firm leaders told us they needed situational awareness rather than reams of printed reports about what happened in the past. They told us that increasingly they must know exactly how the firm is doing in real time. And beyond knowing what is happening, they need information and tools to make the right decisions to get back on track to achieve their goals.

- No need for custom reports accessed separately from Juris. All Microsoft® Access® reports and any future custom reports can be converted into the firm's report library in Juris Suite.

- Advanced report design capabilities enable the firm to create a vast array of custom reports, including Web-page-like "dashboards." Reports are no longer limited to columns and rows, but also images, charts and graphs can be embedded.

- Design new reports from existing reports by using any report as a starter template.

LexisNexis®

- Tailor reports to each individual at the firm to meet their unique demands. And each individual can decide in what format(s) and when they want to receive information. Delivery is handled automatically.

- Link reports together to facilitate complex drilldown relationships and analysis.

- Easy export to Excel® for analysis.

- Analysis tools such as "pivot-table" features allow for easy manipulation of data, like changing parameters, reorganizing and sorting information.

Lexis® Online Marketplace

Juris subscription customers have access to Lexis online marketplace, a resource for content including reports, billing formats and billing compliance rules.

About the Juris Suite

Juris Suite consists of MyJuris and Core Reporting with optional add-in modules: Business Intelligence and Budgeting. Core Reporting include the standard Juris library of reports, including enhanced financial statements, tools to design and import custom reports and reporting distribution tools. The Business Intelligence module incorporates a separate data cube to significantly increase the speed of report processing, which is particularly important for larger firms or firms with demanding reporting requirements involving large transaction volumes over multiple accounting periods. In addition, Business Intelligence will include the dashboard designer, the business metrics standard library and the metrics designer. Budgeting will enable firms to build more complex budgets and incorporate that information in custom reports, dashboards, and key performance indicators/metrics. Budgeting will also include import tools to bring in payroll information and other relevant data to design the most complex analyses that require detailed staff cost information.
