Featured Tip

Using Subject-Specific Search Forms for More Focused Results

In addition to the main Academic Search that allows users to search across our content collection in a single query, LexisNexis Academic offers twenty-two unique subject- and content-specific search forms, allowing users to focus their search efforts on more precise areas of interest and to discover authoritative publications and resources that are relevant to their field of study.

Each search form provides a tailored set of advanced options and a default selection of publications.

For each subject-specific search form, you can create a permanent link directly to that form, allowing you to use that particular collection in research guides, syllabi and class assignments.

To access the full list of the available search forms, select Search by Content Type from the LexisNexis Academic start page.
