How Russian Sanctions Impact Energy And Financial Cos.

Law360, New York (October 29, 2014, 1:08 PM ET) -- The U.S. Department of the Treasury and the European Union have continued to expand the scope of economic sanctions in response to Russian activities and the political unrest in Ukraine. These policy changes create added uncertainty, and practices and procedures that were in compliance a few months ago may not pass muster today. In this short video, Sutherland Asbill & Brennan LLP partner Mark D. Herlach discusses recent key developments and what the latest round of Russian sanctions mean for energy and financial services companies.

Based in Washington, D.C., Mark Herlach is an international lawyer with a practice focus on energy and international business. He is a member of Sutherland's energy practice group and chairman of the firm's nuclear energy team.
